Advice For Top Negroes

JKK Cautions Against Violent Demonstrations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy cautioned a divided Negro leadership Saturday against violent demonstrations—or those that breed violence—in their antisegregation drive.

He reportedly questioned the wisdom of a mass demonstration in Washington — which might converge 100,000 marchers on Capitol Hill — but the Negro leaders indicated it will be carried out if the administration's civil rights legislation is blocked by a Senate filibuster.

The President did not ask for a complete halt to demonstrations which have been staged recently in the streets of scores of Southern and Northern cities. And, after the White House session, Negro spokesmen who differ on some points agreed there is no prospect of an end to demonstrations until their causes are resolved.

But all pledged every effor to keep them peaceful.

Both Negro and white desegregation leaders assured the President of their all-out support for his pending civil rights legislation. Some Negroes told newsmen that demonstrations will be used to dramatize this support and these manifestations may be climaxed in August by a mass march on Washington.

Saturday's White House conference concluded, at least temporarily, Kennedy's unprecedented series of personal appeals to small groups of leaders from many fields for a voluntary and peaceful end to segregation in public places, private business, housing, labor unions, churches and schools.

Before leaving Washington for a 10-day trip to Europe, Kennedy took another step to help Negroes get jobs when he signed an order setting forth procedures under which funds can be denied to employers on federal projects who deny employment to Negroes on a racial basis or allow unions to do so.

It seemed obvious that one aim of Saturday's White House meeting of 30 desegregation advocates was to achieve some greater degree of unity and cooperation among Negro leaders whose division over methods — and financing—has come forcefully into the open in the past week.

Underscoring this objective was the fact that the President before the general meeting had one private, 30-minute session with Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and another with the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

It was Wilkins who in a speech last Sunday charged that other groups "furnish the noise" while the NAACP does the hard, continuing work "and pays the bills" in desegregation campaign.

Feel Good Progress Is Made

In Erasing Signs Which Specify 'Whites Only'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Kennedy administration feels considerable progress is being made in erasing "White Only" signs in the South and border states, but still regards the racial situation as explosive in both North and South.

This can be reported on the authority of officials in the know. One said:

"I have just conferred with federal judges in Philadelphia and there couldn't be a more scared or frightened group."

Philadelphia was the scene of violence last month, amid Negro charges of discrimination by some labor unions. Negroes there, as in many other places, have been demanding better job opportunities, housing and education.

Even if the last "White Only" sign in the nation came down today, the administration official said, the country would only be in transition toward tackling a graver problem—the terrifically high unemployment among Negroes, many of whom are unequipped by education or training to hold good jobs.

For example, the official mentioned Cambridge, Md., where demonstrations against restaurant segregation and other racial barriers, erupted into violence last week. Unemployment among Negroes in that city on Maryland's eastern shore is 29.5 per cent.

Car Theft Is Solved Quickly By Authorities

A car reported stolen Friday night from Whiteman Air Force Base was recovered early Saturday by Sedalia and Pettis County authorities, but no criminal charges are expected to be filed.

The base provost marshal's office reported the car missing. At 3:55 a.m. Saturday Police Officer Vic Phelps spotted the car outside a service station and cafe on South Highway 65.

Officer Phelps radioed in the report, another police car was sent to assist and Deputy Sheriff Jack Couts was notified.

The two subjects who had been in the car were taken into custody by the officers and placed in the county jail by Deputy Couts.

Saturday morning, Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said the car had been financed through the base credit exchange and that the driver was a former owner, who still had keys to the car. Fairfax said he believed the matter should be settled with civil action.

One of the two youths in the car was a juvenile, Fairfax said, and the other was an airman. They were released from jail later Saturday and disposition of the airman was left up to Air Force authorities.

Fourth Ready to Go

Three Nuclear Subs Launched

GROTON, Conn. (AP) —Three new nuclear submarines slid down the ways and a fourth was poised to follow Saturday in a burst of shipyard activity unusual for peacetime.

The Tecumseh and the Flasher were launched simultaneously at Groton shortly after the old Flasher was towed past on her last voyage, to a scrap yard.

At Newport News, Va., the John C. Calhoun was sent down the ways about an hour and 40 minutes later.

The fourth, the Daniel Boone, was to be launched later at Mare Island, Calif.

For the new submarines there were speeches and splattering champagne.

For the old Flasher, which sank more enemy tonnage during World War II than any other U.S. submarine, there was just a quiet trip down Long Island Sound en route to a scrap heap at Roebling, N.J. She was towed past the ways before the launchings.

The new Flasher is an attack sub, a sister ship of the lost Thresher, which went down in the Atlantic April 10 with a loss of 129 lives.

The Tecumseh, Calhoun and Boone all are Polaris missile-firing vessels.

The Flasher and the Tecumseh were sent down the ways simultaneously, but about half a mile apart in the yard of the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp.

On board the Tecumseh, named for the famed Shawnee chief who tried to marshal a number of quarreling Indian tribes into a united stand against the white men, were two Shawnees in full regalia.

They were Jerome Shawnee, current chief of the tribe, and Provisional Chief Robert Wayne Shapp, both of Tulsa, Okla.

Outside the gate of the shipyard, where 17 nuclear subs have been launched, including the pioneer Nautilus, opposing pickets faced each other on opposite sides of the street.

Big Turnout For Coin Show Here

There are scads of them.

A fabulous assortment of coins to make any numismatist drool is on display at the Central Missouri Coin Club annual show in the Agriculture building at the Missouri State Fair grounds from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Sunday. This is the last of a two-day show.

The setting for this annual event is ideal in a building that provides three entrances, air-conditioning, unrestricted space, rest rooms, and refreshments of food and drink.

Collectors, young and old, or those just curious to see what an unlimited supply of rare and semi-rare coins looks like can spend hours at the show and come away better informed about what makes a numismatist tick, according to those who planned the affair: President Lloyd Phillips; Vice-President Cecil Schick; Secretary Harold Garrett; Bill Hert, and other members of the coin club.

The show got underway Saturday morning with bourse tables all around the interior which attracted hungry collectors all day long making purchases to fill out incompleted sets. None would venture to estimate the value of all the coins displayed, but it must be tremendous — prices ranging from 10 cents to hundreds of dollars for a single item. Dealers from California, Florida, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri.

Highlight of Saturday's show was the coin auction that night

U.S. Stars Will Go To Red Festival

MOSCOW (AP) — Film stars Danny Kaye, Tony Curtis, Charlton Heston and Shelley Winters have said they will attend the Moscow Film Festival, beginning July 7, the American Embassy spokesman reports. The official American entry is a new Hollywood epic on Americans escaping Nazis prison, titled "The Great Escape."

To First Postponement

Reasonably Happy With Tax Cut Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration is reasonably happy with the tax-reduction bill as it is shaping up and will fight any more to postpone it until next year, administration sources said Saturday.

They refused to concede that President Kennedy's tax program is imperiled by the looming battle in Congress over his civil rights proposals, although House backers of the tax bill fear a serious slowdown.

Southern segregationists may counter-attack against Kennedy by stalling on the tax bill, House sources said. And if the House nevertheless passes a tax cut, they noted, an even greater hazard remains that the bill may be stalled by a Senate filibuster on civil rights.

The threat was discounted privately by a high official who keeps close watch on tax developments. Tax-cutting sentiment has grown stronger in Congress and the country in recent weeks, he said, adding:

"It is absurd to suggest that the President would weaken his insistence on the tax program because of the civil rights bill. He wants them both—this session."

Kennedy has indicated as much, though this could mean keeping Congress in Washington until far on into the fall.

But administration sources indicated they are satisfied with progress of the tax bill to date, though many of Kennedy's original requests have been tossed into the wastebasket by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Garbage Collection Will be Made Twice Each Week in City

After many long and furtive glances at overburgeoned garbage cans Sedalia residents will be glad to know that twice-a-week garbage collection is at last a reality. The added service will begin Monday, in time to avoid the hot summer days.

According to Willard Morris, sanitation officer, four extra men will be added to the sanitation department crews to meet the extra work load. The work week will also be extended from the present five days to six days. The work of collecting garbage will be doubled resulting in these extra steps.

It was also pointed out by Morris that these extra activities will be paid for out of regular revenues. No extra charges will be made for the collection of garbage.

Pope's First Day

Wants to Avoid A Nuclear War

VATICAN CITY (AP) — In his first message to the world, Pope Paul VI set out in the footsteps of Pope John XXIII Saturday calling on mankind to avoid nuclear war and to build instead a world with social justice, brotherly love and "saintly fear of God."

He promised as "the pre-eminent part of our pontificate" to continue the Vatican Ecumenical Council, called by Pope John in in his effort to heal the rifts of Christendom and to adjust the Roman Catholic Church to the future needs of the human race.

Pope Paul told the Roman Catholic faithful behind the Iron Curtain and wherever the church is suppressed to "feel themselves near to us" and to look with hope to "the radiant dawn of resurrection."

Then, the 65-year-old new pontiff went into the grotto below St. Peter's Basilica and knelt in prayer beside the tomb of his predecessor and friend who died June 3 after a pontificate of four years and seven months.

Pope Paul, in his first full day as leader of the world's half billion Roman Catholics, spoke in Latin over Vatican Radio from the Sistine Chapel where he was selected by the College of Cardinals Friday.

His message was filled with remembrances and praise of Pope John.

"We love to remember," he said, "with mindful and moving piety, the figure of the late John XXIII, who in the brief but very intense period of his ministry, was able to bring near to him the hearts of men, even those distant."

In what appeared to be a reference to the United States and the Soviet Union, Pope Paul touched on the space race.

"The new epoch which the conquests of space have opened to mankind," he said, "will be singularly blessed by the Lord if men know truly how to recognize each other as brothers rather than competitors, and build a world order in saintly fear of God, in respect of His laws, in the light of sweet charity and mutual collaboration."

Trailblazer Rabbit Convention Show Will Be Held in Sedalia

The Trailblazers Rabbit Convention Show, 40th American Rabbit Breeders Association National Conveniton, will be held in Sedalia Oct. 7-11. It is sponsored by Midwest Rabbit Breeders Association, Inc.

This is the highlight of the year with the association and since Missouri is so centrally located it is expected that this will be the largest attendance and rabbit entries of any convention. Hotel Bothwell will be convention headquarters and the State Fair grounds, the association feels, is an ideal location. C. L. Farley is reservation chairman.

The catalogue will be printed in Sedalia and will be sent to all parts of the United States, Canada and some foreign countries to parties interested in attending and showing their stock.

Carter Is Scheduled For Appearance In Court on Monday

Benny M. Carter, 33, 728 West Cooper, is scheduled to appear before Judge Frank Armstrong in Magistrate Court at 10 a.m. Monday for preliminary hearing on a charge of second degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife early May 22.

Carter's wife, Mrs. Helen Carter, 29, was struck in the fleshy part of the hand and mouth by a bullet from a gun being held by Carter. She died at Bothwell Hospital in late afternoon the day she was wounded.

Carter was charged after a coroner's jury returned a verdict that the shooting was a felony.

He has been free on $5,000 bond. A preliminary hearing had been scheduled for June 6, but Carter was granted a continuance.

Leaves for Italy

OTTAWA (AP) — A $7,000 shipment of Eskimo clothing and handicrafts is leaving Monday for Italy. It includes sealskin slippers, parkas, hats, gloves and other items to be billed "winter resort clothing" by a Milan firm, and if sales go well Canada's Northern Affairs Department hopes for a production boom among its charges.

Reactions To Visit Are Varied

Sex Scandal Has First Attention In Some Countries

LONDON (AP)—A British paint salesman still dizzy from reading about the sex and security scandal that has rocked Britain's government confessed he had almost overlooked the approach of President Kennedy's visit to Europe.

In Rome, a taxi driver said he remembered reading something about Kennedy's visit to Italy June 30 but that it had slipped his mind amid all the news about the Italian government crisis and the election of a new Pope.

But in West Germany and Ireland they've been looking forward to the day of Kennedy's arrival for some time.

Said West Berlin housewife Irene Mueller:

"At long last we're getting a chance to welcome the American President. Khrushchev has been six times to East Berlin."

And in Ireland they're preparing for a sort of a homecoming for the grandson of Irish emigrants. American flags have been sold out for days.

This was the picture Saturday, on the eve of the President's arrival in Bonn, West Germany, for the start of a 10-day European tour. Some Britons saw no sense in his coming to Britain. They felt Harold Macmillan's days as prime minister are numbered.

A sampling of man-on-the-street views seemed to show that Italians were preoccupied with their own problems at the moment. But Kennedy isn't due in Italy until the end of his tour.

Help for Nigeria

LONDON (AP) — Britain is lending Nigeria $3.36 million to help Nigerian railways buy steel rails and accessories from British companies, the treasury announced.

Rutledge Death Ruled A Homicide

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A top executive of McDonnell Aircraft Corp. was killed in a three-vehicle accident Saturday and Coroner Raymond Harris of St. Louis County ruled the death homicide.

Thomas George Rutledge, 45, a vice president, member of the board of directors and general counsel for McDonnell, a space capsule manufacturer, was dead on arrival at St. Louis County Hospital after the smash-up on Lindbergh boulevard in the county.

Harris said he ruled Rutledge's death homicide because of careless and reckless driving by James Marshall, 23, of suburban Kinloch. Marshall was the driver of a truck loaded with about 6,800 pounds of gravel that sideswiped an auto driven by Fred Bostrom Jr. of Kearny, N.J., and then collided with the Rutledge auto, Highway Patrol trooper Leroy Tubbesing said. Marshall is in serious condition with possible head injuries.

Tubbesing cited Marshall for driving on the wrong side of the road and driving without a chauffeur's license. Harris ordered that Marshall be held at St. Louis county hospital because of the homicide ruling.

Police said Rutledge was on his way to work from his home in fashionable Ladue.

Police quoted Bostrom as saying Marshall's truck swerved before colliding with his car and then colliding with the Rutledge automobile.

"I saw the collision of the other vehicle in my rear vision mirror," Bostrom said. Bostrom was not injured.

Ruthledge is survived by his widow, and two daughters, Elizabeth, 10 and Sarah, 6.

On Eve of JFK Visit

Dead Zone Is Set Up by E. Germans

BONN, Germany (AP) — East Germany's Communist regime purposely picked the eve of President Kennedy's visit to Germany to challenge the rights of the West at the Berlin Wall, a Western official said Saturday. The last such challenge brought a confrontation of U.S. and Soviet tanks.

With Kennedy due here Sunday for the start of his 10-day European tour, the East German Communists created a dead zone 110 yards wide on their side of the wall. They forbade anyone from entering the zone, including Western military men who are allowed to circulate freely in the divided city.

The decree also means that few East Germans, except for border guards, will be able to see Kennedy when he visits Berlin on Wednesday.

The military commanders of the United States, Britain and France said in Berlin they would not respect the dead zone. They called it the "most brutal action" by the Communists since they built the red wall on Aug. 13, 1961.

The West German government press office said the timing of the measure showed that it was one of the disturbances planned by the East German regime for Kennedy's visit.

Aside from challenging the West in Berlin, the East German dead zone appears aimed at reducing the number of escape routes into the West Zone.

In addition to the dead zone at the 25-mile Berlin Wall, the East Germans imposed another forbidden zone—545 yards wide—along the 76 miles of border that makes West Berlin an island inside East Germany.

The United States, Britain and France have 12,500 men in their Berlin garrisons. The three Western powers maintain that their soldiers have a right to circulate freely in the divided city. The Allies viewed the dead zones as a challenge to this right.

First Stop Will Be In Germany

Kennedy Carries Personal Message Of US Friendship

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy headed toward Europe Saturday night on a 10-day mission to promote good will and unity in the Atlantic community.

A jet transport carrying the President took off from Andrews Air Force Base, just outside Washington in Maryland, at 9:37 p.m. Its destination is Wahn Airport in West Germany and the start of a four-day round of receptions and speech-making from Bonn to Berlin.

Kennedy had spent part of the afternoon at his Camp David, Md., mountain retreat, then was ferried to Andrews by helicopter.

The flight to Germany was expected to take a little under seven hours.

Sunday morning Kennedy will motor from Wahn Airport to Cologne, where he will attend Mass nauer at the famous Cologne Cathedral.

On Wednesday he will go to West Berlin, the first American president to visit the Communist-encircled city since Harry S. Truman attended the Potsdam conference at the end of World War II.

In advance of Kennedy's arrival, the East Germans proclaimed a 110-yard forbidden zone on the Communist side of the Berlin wall. That means few East Berliners will be able to see the President when he pays a call at the Western side of the Checkpoint Charlie gateway.

The President will carry a personal message of friendship from the United States. Much of Western Europe will see a seven-hour step-by-step telecast of his motor tour through the city as it is beamed within range of more than 25 million television receivers in 12 countries. Washington diplomats heard that the Reds might try to stage a counterattraction the same day, perhaps an East Berlin visit by Russia's two newest astronauts, Valentina Tereshkova and Valery Bykovsky.

From Berlin Kennedy will fly to Dublin for a 2½-day sentimental visit to the land of his Irish ancestors. Then he goes on to England for a day at the country home of Prime Minister Harold Macmillan near London.

Blow For Canine Equality

A blow for canine equality was struck here Thursday when a new arrival shower was held in honor of a mixed breed male puppy named "Sam" and its new owner Mrs. Clara Brown, clerk of the Magistrate Court.

The shower was strictly a surprise event planned by Mrs. Ila Rymer, clerk of the Probate Court, who is a fellow courthouse employee with Mrs. Brown.

Ila set up the shower in the Tea Room of Flower's Department Store, where she, Clara and several other Sedalia women regularly meet for lunch. Those in on the shower included, besides Ila and Clara, Georgia Rank, Opal Williams, Ruby Dunn and Virginia Oswald.

Clara arrived for lunch and noticed the festive decorations, her first inkling of the dog shower.

Gifts for the puppy included a bouquet of flowers in a double feeder, collar, shoes, shampoo, a teething ring, dog candy, rubber toys and a pair of rubber pants—hopefully intended to lessen the damage of house training. Favors were individually wrapped dog biscuits.

The puppy acquired Monday, esembles a beagle-basset mixture, but it's still too soon to tell.

Sam, incidentally, couldn't attend his shower, but he is reported delighted to be such an honored dog.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I have read your column for almost eight years and have learned a lot from it. Because of you I no longer feel guilty about refusing to answer the doorbell when the neighborhood pest shows up at 9:30 a. m. with her 3-year-old—full of conversation which used to last through lunch.

Now I have another problem. Does a person have the right NOT to answer the telephone if she doesn't feel like talking, or if it is inconvient?

A certain relative who is a notorious yakker telephones me at approximately the same time every morning. She has tied me up for a s long as 45 minutes with petty gossip and foolish chatter. I decided to just let the phone ring. I think she is wise. Am I wrong to do this?—WILL POWER.

Dear Will: The person who puts in the call does so at HER convenience. Just because she is willing, able and ready to gab is no sign you have to be on deck to listen.

If you don't feel like talking—or listening — just let the bloomin' thing ring.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter will be 14 late this summer and we do not allow her to date. Both my husband and I are avid readers of your column and we are standing firm on this dating business until Margo gets to high school, which is what you recommend.

The problem is this: Margo has numerous friends, both boys and girls. She receives a good many telephone calls and both boys and girls seem to be visiting here frequently.

Shall we discourage the boys from calling or coming to the house? My husband or I are always present so the children are well chaperoned.

We don't want to be too strict with our daughter but we don't want to go to the other extreme either. Where is the sensible middle ground? Thank you.—PONCA CITY.

Dear Ponca: You are wise to seek the middle ground and I believe it's where you are at the moment.

Keep saying no to dating until Margo is in high school, but permit boys to telephone and come to the house to visit. She won't feel deprived, yet she won't be dating.

My hat is off to you for having sense enough to insist on remaining in the driver's seat. These days too many parents are collapsable.

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is not one on which the world will rise or fall but it has caused me endless consternation and I need help.

About four months ago I began to date a very nice man who operates a small business near my place of employment. He invited me out and I accepted. He brought along a corsage of green baby orchids. My dress was electric blue. I wore the flowers although electric blue and green are hideous together, as you can imagine.

Two weeks later it happened again. He brought along a corsage of red roses. My dress was a flaming tangerine. The color combination couldn't have been more nauseating.

Last week his lodge had its summer formal. This time he went all out—a huge purple orchid. My gown was ming dynasty red. I couldn't bear to put that purple flower on my red gown. So I pinned it to my evening bag. I'm afraid he was hurt.

Do you have any advice for me?

This man seems to have a rare talent for selecting flowers of exactly the wrong color.—ERNA.

Dear Erna: Don't discourage his tender sentiments. Just let him know that your favorite flowers are white roses, gardenias, orchids, peonies, lillies, mums, ANYTHING white.

Mrs. Neumeyer Tells Club of Rose Culture

Mrs. Audrey Neumeyer gave a talk on roses, planting and culture at the June 20 meeting of Smithton Garden Club at the home of Mrs. August F. Oehrke. Thirteen members and one guest, Mrs. Oehrke's mother, Mrs. Gemendew, were present.

Miss Laura Krause, president, opened the meeting with prayer, followed by roll call, "My Favorite Rose." There was a short business session and discussion about a flower show to be held later.

Mrs. Neumeyer named two new 1963 roses: Summer Sunshine, a yellow rose; and Tropicana, an orange red hybrid tea rose and winner of 13 international awards.

Awards went to: Mrs. F. L. Bodenhamer, first; Mrs. Euel Muschany, second, and Miss Laura Krause, third, far arrangement of roses.

Crows Are Adapting To Urban Life

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Crows are such adaptable feeders that they patronize hot dog stands in Hollywood, scientists were told today.

"The voice of the crow is now part of city life" and their robbing of the nests of mocking birds and jays has brought a new noise to urban communities — a new phenomenon, Roland Cass Ross of Los Angeles State College told the 44th annual meeting of the Pacific division, American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"Feeding habits have changed." Now in some communities, North Hollywood for instance, "their first flight mornings is to hot dog stands, night gas stations and drive-in movie lots for food debris and light-killed insects before cleanup crews arrive," Ross reported.

Millionaire Edward Doheny III Marries

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Recently divorced oil heir Edward L. Doheny III, is married again, his attorney reports.

Attorney Vernon Barrett disclosed Thursday that Doheny has taken the former Joyce Annett Vanderbilt as his bride. She is the widow of millionaire sportsman George Vanderbilt.

The couple obtained a license last Monday in suburban Santa Ana, and were married the following day at the home of Dohen's uncle, C. Warren Smith of Newport Beach, Calif.

Doheny, 46, was divorced last Friday in Reno, Nev., from his wife, Margaret.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was the fourth wife of George Vanderbilt, who died June 24 1961 in a plunge from a San Francisco hotel. She gave her residence as Honolulu, Hawaii.

An Increased Tempo

The Story Behind Our Increasing Submarine Fleet

EDITOR'S NOTE—Not since the frantic days of World War II has the like been seen: Four New American submarines — all nuclear—are poised for launching Saturday at three shipyards. It marks a high point of U.S. atomic submarine production in a big, fast-paced program that may eventually cost some $15 billion. Why the rush? How does the U.S. fleet stack up with the Soviet Fleet? Elton C. Fay, Associated Press Staff Writer, who has been reporting military affairs for 20 years analyzes the situation.

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — American production of nuclear submarines surged to a new high tide Saturday.

Four subs—three Polaris and one attack craft — rode down the ways at three yards.

Not since the frantic tempo of World War II has this happened.

On a January day in 1944 four submarines were launched. But they were the now obsolete diesel-electric types, simple to build compared with the intricate atomic powered undersea warships of this age.

The goal, as it now stands, is to build 86 atomic submarines before the close of this decade, about half of them Polaris, the others attack subs.

By the end of this month, the money spent or committed since the pioneer Nautilus was launched in 1952 will have run up to $6,573,089,000. The cost of the complete fleet eventually may be about $15 billion. This doesn't include tender ships and special shore facilities—nor the missiles and torpedoes carried by the submarines.

Example: One Polaris missile costs slightly more than $1 million. There are 16 missiles in each submarine, others stockpiled ashore.

Here is yesterday's schedule of launchings:

The Polaris submarine Tecumseh and the attack submarine Flasher were launched at Groton, Conn., yard of Electric Boat Division, General Dynamics Corp.

The John C. Calhoun, Polaris ship, at the Virginia yards of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company.

The Polaris submarine Daniel Boone at the Navy's Mare Island, Calif., yard.

For the next several years, atomic powered submarines—Polaris and attack—will be delivered to the fleet at the rate of one a month. This doesn't mean that they will be launched at that rate. The Navy has a backlog of new submarines in the water to be completed and commissioned. By Saturday night, the total of launched submarines, awaiting completion and commission, will be 12.

Although there is no hot war now, the urgency to build submarines is almost as great as in the shooting war two decades ago. The race with the Soviet Union is growing tight.

The United States (even with its huge building program and a head start in the nuclear submarine field) holds only a "very small numerical advantage" over the Soviet Union, Adm. George W. Anderson, Chief of Naval Operations, said recently.

The reason for the race is two-fold: To build a force of Polaris submarines big enough and fast enough to help maintain the missile lead over the Soviet Union; to build a force of deep-diving, high speed, far roaming attack submarines to cope with the Kremlin's own Polaris-type sub threat to American cities.

The U.S. Navy fleet has 28 atomic-powered submarines — 11 Polaris; one guided missile craft; 16 attack subs.

The Navy estimates that since the Nautilus backed away from a pier and sent the historic message "under way on nuclear power" on Jan. 17, 1955, the Navy's atomic submarines have steamed about 2.25 million miles, mostly underwater.

American atomic submarines have girdled the globe submerged, voyaged under the ice of the North Pole. They wait at stations, under the ocean waves, with missiles in their tubes, within range of the Soviet Union. They roam deep and far to guard against hostile submarines approaching American shores or shipping.

A half dozen shipyards are in the nuclear submarine building program, and the rate of constructing the atomic fleet may prove to be faster than crews can be provided.

Manning 86 atomic submarines will require more than 16,000 men —each specialized in the already specialized technique of handling submarines. Many will come from conventional submarines after training in operation of nuclear power plants and nuclear weapons, both missiles and torpedoes.

The Navy foresaw the training problem as soon as it conceived the idea for a nuclear-powered submarine. Schools were started. About 2,000 men are in classes at any one time, but the Navy hopes that by next year the size of the classes can begin to diminish.

It is easier to man the programmed 44 attack submarines than the 41 Polaris ships.

The attack submarine has a crew of 80 to 100 men, compared with the 260 for a Polaris.

But the conditions of work are different. A Polaris submarine takes station and may remain submerged continuously for 60 days. Although the crews rotate, the ship itself remains overseas for prolonged periods. The George Washington, first of the Polaris ships deployed, has piled up more than 2½ years overseas.

The glamor of Polaris service may be wearing off. Navy officials say the morale of crews remains high, but more men are declining to re-enlist. About half of the Polaris crewmen eligible to re-enlist after their first tour are getting out, the Navy admits.

The re-enlistment rate is better for the attack submarines. They put out of home ports, serve in patrols, come back in port.

The loss of the attack submarine Thresher last April did not have serious impact on the number of men volunteering for submarine service, the Navy says. But it cannot be denied that wives, if not the men themselves, may worry more now about their men in submarines. And they do have influence when the question of re-enlisting or volunteering comes up.

The Thresher, which had 129 Navy and civilian men aboard, has not been found although the Navy has scoured the suspected area of the wreck 220 miles off the New England coast in waters 8,400 feet deep. A court of inquiry has reported that the Thresher's fatal trouble was most likely a rupture of an engineroom pipe under heavy sea pressure.

Two Thresher class submarines operating with the fleet in the Pacific are under orders to limit the depth to which they dive, pending further studies. Another Thresher class ship, scheduled to have started sea trials a week ago, is back in drydock at Portsmouth, N.H. for more X-ray studies of her hull.

Almost immediately after the loss of the Thresher, the Navy announced that it would take a close look at the design of Thresher class submarines still to be built. The program calls for 21 (not including the Thresher), of which two are now in commission.

Old Drug Used In Lung Cancer

By FRANK CAREY
Associated Press Science Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Scientists are exploring the possibility of using Atabrine — the armed forces' prime drug weapon against malaria early in World War II—as a kind of "Trojan Horse" to fight lung cancer.

The idea would be to use Atabrine, which itself has no effect on cancer, as a vehicle for transporting radiation—or cancer-fighting drugs to the site of the malignancy—without harming normal tissue enroute.

It would be much like the way the ancient Greeks used their wooden "gift" horse to sneak their warriors inside the walls of Troy.

Drs. Alvin Shemesh and Norman B. Ackerman of the University of Minnesota Medical School told about it in a statement prepared for the closing session of the American Medical Association's 12th annual meeting today.

The Minnesota researchers said they had found that Atabrine, and other compounds of the "aminoacridine" family, have a tendency to concentrate most heavily in the lungs and liver when administered to experimental animals.

Declaring that Atabrine and some of its chemical cousins can be made to fluoresce, or "glow," when exposed to ultra-violet light, they said they used this technique to trace the distribution of such chemicals in the tissues of animals in which experimental tumors had been implanted at various sites.

Some of the compounds, including Atabrine, were strongly concentrated by tumors in the lungs.

Within minutes after administration, the tumors and the normal lung tissue would "light up," but by 24 hours the glowing would be limited to the cancer area which would remain bright for about four days.

The doctors said lung tumors in animals can be identified and pinpointed in the lung area by this method when the chest is opened surgically—and they thereby implied that the method might offer a way to aiding diagnosis of lung cancer in suspicious human cases.

They also reported they are now working on a new slant.

They have procured radioactive forms of Atabrine and are using them in lung-tumorous rats to study the effect on the cancer.

Other doctors at the meeting told reporters the Minnesota work suggests the possibility of "tagging" Atabrine with drugs which conceivably might have some effect on lung cancer, if delivered to the target in sufficient strength.

One of the drawbacks to chemical attack on cancer in the past has been the fact that most of the drugs can't restrict their action to the cancer site. Thus, doses theoretically high enough to damage a cancer would be dangerous to the rest of the body.

Carolyn Stuhrman Returns From 3-Year Stay in Europe

Carolyn Stuhrman

"I want you to know brethren, that what has happened to me has really served to advance the gospel. . ." This verse from the Bible, Philippians 1:12, is the basis for the personal philosophy of Miss Carolyn Stuhrman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Stuhrman, Sweet Springs.

Miss Stuhrman has spent the last three years in Europe as secretary to the European director of The Navigators, an international interdenominational Christian organization. The organization was founded in 1932 by Dawson Trotman. The organization trains counselors for the Billy Graham Crusades.

Miss Stuhrman's residence was The Hague, Holland, but she visited eleven European countries. She chooses no favorite, but recalls one spot as a combination of both outstanding loveliness and interest, the Loire Valley of France. In a radius of 150 miles, there are 50 castles of all styles of architecture dating from the 14th century. "To American eyes they seem rather cold, barren, and damp," Miss Stuhrman said, "but they are beautiful."

"The art of conversation is lost in the United States." The European custom of having guests in for coffee and conversation in preference to bridge or switching on the television set made a vivid impression on Miss Stuhrman. She found the people much more reserved about personal opinions than Americans, but much easier and more eager to talk to "about things."

"Whenever I tell someone I lived in Holland for three years, they invariably ask about tulips and wooden shoes." It seems the two often go together. Wooden shoes are still worn, particularly by the more provincial people and field workers. They are often painted red, black, or yellow, and are definitely noisy. Miss Stuhrman recalls talking to an 80-year-old maker of the shoes whose greatest disappointment was the lack of a son to carry on the family trade. Tulip fields stretch for colorful miles in the lowlands and make traveling a pleasure.

Shopping in Holland is done daily, and in a manner that would appall many efficient American housewives. "You go to one store for cheese, another for fish, a third for fowl, and so on." Bread is baked fresh every day and delivered door-to-door. Miss Stuhrman found the Europeans to be much more conservative in their eating habits. One hot meal is served per day with two cold "bread meals" consisting of butter, cheese, jelly, and at times cold meat. Much less meat is consumed than in the United States. Miss Stuhrman didn't care for the European version of the hamburger stand — the raw herring stand. "The proper way to eat a raw herring is to throw one's head back, hold the fish by the tail, and munch. I just never did get accustomed to that!"

Miss Stuhrman is now working at world headquarters of The Navigators, Colorado Springs, Colo. She says she enjoyed Europe, but finds it good to be back home.

Switzerland's most famous peak, the Matterhorn, first was climbed in 1865.

Public Relations For Churches

By MARIE PRICE

NEW YORK (AP)—Are public relations techniques suitable for church use?

A 385-page "yes" answer has been written by the Rev. Thomas J. M. Burke, S.J., director of public relations for Jesuit Missions, in a doctoral dissertation said to be the first one on public relations for religious institutions.

"All religious groups, at every level of American society, can and should use organized public relations techniques to remove unnecessary conflict and misunderstanding among themselves and between religious groups and society at large," says Father Burke.

He was awarded a Ph. D. degree June 5 from New York University.

In his thesis, Father Burke outlines how all creeds can utilize the elements of planing and continued direction that are essential to a successful public relations campaign.

His view is this:

The basis of public relations is to persuade people. Religious groups aim at persuading people of an ethical truth they think is usable.

So, using techniques highly developed by professional public relations men can enable churches to promote religious and social values in society, communicate better with their own people, and further cooperation among denominations.

If religious values are to have the place they should have in people's lives, he says, "public relations will have to be utilized lest the field be left only to values being promoted by business and government."

There is nothing inherently wrong with business and government values, Father Burke believes, but they are limited. "And in every community where the impact of religious values is lost, the community as a whole loses," he says.

Father Burke's thesis describes methods religious groups can use to aid themselves if they're unknown in a community, misunderstood, opposed or isolated. And he thinks there is a greater need for this kind of information than most people realize.

Also, his thesis explains how using public relations planning and organization to set up common programs would enable differing groups to cooperate.

A native of Boston, Father Burke formerly served as religion editor of "America," a Catholic news commentary magazine.

Political Revolution In Crystal City, Texas

By TOM HENSHAW

CRYSTAL CITY, Tex. (AP)—It's hard to picture Crystal City as a symbol of political revolution.

It's a quiet, slow-moving farm town; dusty, slightly scorched by the hot South Texas sun; best known for a statue of Popeye the sailor that faces city hall across broad East Zavala Street, proclaiming "The Spinach Capital of the World."

It has a population of about 10,000. Some 2,000 Anglo-Americans hold its purse strings. Most of its 8,000 Latin-Americans work sporadically in the fields and vegetable packing sheds. Many are migrants. They follow the crops north in the summer.

Crystal City is quietly and proudly conservative, too. Until January 1961, when a million-dollar bond issue was voted for public works, it was free of debt—and a bit rundown because of it. Most of its streets are unpaved. Some sections still have outdoor privies.

Until this spring, local politics were apathetic. An average turnout for a city council election was 300 voters. Mayor B. H. Holsomback, a retired banker, had been in office for 33 years. He tried to quit several times, he says, but no one else wanted the job.

The little world of Crystal City was content, predictable and mildly prosperous.

But two months ago, with an aggressiveness that first bewildered and then frightened the complacent Anglos, the Latin majority in Crystal City suddenly arose at the ballot box and captured City Hall.

Into the mayor's office went Juan Cornejo, 33, a Teamsters Union business agent who sometimes has to grope for the proper word in English since his formal education ended in "an average of the eighth grade."

It was more than just a local political upset. The results were heard far beyond the confines of Crystal City. Many south Texas cities, run by Anglos, have large Latin populations. Three aspects of the Crystal City campaign and election intrigue them:

The Latin campaign was directed from San Antonio by the Political Association of Spanish-Speaking Organizations (PASO), a loose-knit and hitherto ineffective group that has talked loudly of "awakening the sleeping giant"—the voters of Mexican descent.

The Teamsters Union, with 300 members in a Crystal City cannery, joined forces with PASO to provide the organizational know-how and pick up part of the tab. There are Teamsters units scattered throughout south Texas.

The Latins ran their campaign frankly on the issue of race, Latin vs. Anglo. Vote for Maldonado, Hernandez, Cardenas, Mendoza and Cornejo "the only true 'Mexicanos' in the race," wrote Albert A. Pena Jr. of San Antonio, PASO state chairman, in an appeal to Crystal City voters.

The modern, organized secret service was founded by Frederick the Great of Prussia.

Negroes Practice

PLAQUEMINE, La. (AP)—City officials turned on the lights at a ball park here so Negroes could practice for a demonstration.

Police Chief Dennis Songy said Negro leaders promised to advise him a day or so prior to a planned demonstration.

The city, in turn, extended the courtesy of turning on the lights at the ball park for a practice session Wednesday night.

Rev. Sullivan Appointed To College Post

The Rev. Francis B. Sullivan, C.PP.S., a native of Sedalia, has been appointed assistant director and academic dean of St. Joseph College, Calumet Center, East Chicago, Indiana, by the Very Reverend John E. Byrne, C.PP.S., American Provincial of the Society of the Precious Blood.

Father Sullivan was born in Sedalia on July 17, 1920, and attended Sacred Heart grade school. He entered the Society of the Precious Blood at its Brunnerdale Minor Seminary, Canton, Ohio, in 1935 and was ordained a priest on Feb. 2, 1946. Father has been engaged in the field of education since his ordination, teaching at the Society's Brunnerdale Minor Seminary, Canton, Ohio; St. Joseph College, Rensselaer, Ind.; St. Charles Seminary, Carthagena, Ohio, the major seminary and motherhouse of the Society of the Precious Blood; and now at St. Joseph College, Calumet Center. He obtained his Doctor of Theology degree (S.T.D.) from the University of Ottawa in 1952 and his Master's degree in sociology from the University of Notre Dame in 1956.

The Society of the Precious Blood was founded in 1815 by the Roman missionary, St. Gaspar del Bufalo, whom Pope John XXIII referred to as a "founder of Catholic Action." From the time of its American debut in 1844, the Society has entered every phase of church work in North and South America, conducting parishes, schools, missions and chaplaincies in 21 states and in 39 dioceses from Florida to California.

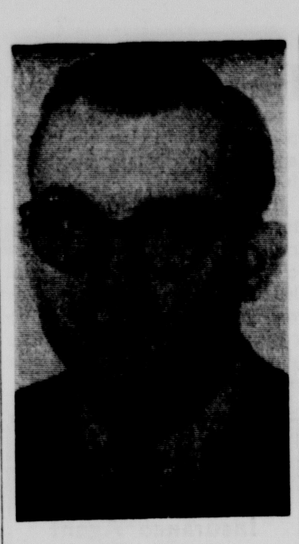
Its foreign mission band, currently numbering 31 members, operates missions in Chile and Peru. Maintaining its own training schools with a minor seminary (Brunnerdale) at Canton, Ohio, and its major seminary and motherhouse (St. Charles) at Carthagena, Ohio, it is currently building another preparatory school (Del Bufalo—named after the founder of the Society) for priests and brothers at Kansas City. The provincial headquarters are at 1125 Harmon Avenue, Dayton, Ohio.

Former C of C Head Urged to Run For Top Seat In Mass.

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A former president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, Ladd Plumley, says he is being urged to run in 1964 for the Republican nomination for governor of Massachusetts.

Plumley said he has an open mind on the possibility but at present "cannot be described as a candidate."

In a copyrighted interview Wednesday with Howard S. Knowles, chief of the Worcester Telegram and Gazette bureau in Boston, Plumley said that suggestions of his candidacy stem in part from his recent activities as national chamber president.



GRADUATE — Robert Spraggins, formerly of Route 2, Sedalia, attended baccalaureate services and was a member of the graduating class at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston, La., June 2 and 3. Spraggins completed requirements for his bachelor of science degree in liberal arts, with a chemistry major and mathematics minor in January. Since that time he has been employed in Lake Charles, La., with Cities Service Research and Development in their petrochemical laboratory. While at the institute, Robert was active with the school's band and orchestra, earning three school music letters; was an honor freshman and was on the dean's list several semesters. Attending the exercises were his wife, Janet Elizabeth, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Spraggins, Route 2.

Boys Club Joins In Freedom Bell Ringing July 4

Members of Sedalia Boys Club will join hundreds of thousands of their fellow members throughout the country in celebrating Independence Day, July 4th.

In cooperation with This Week Magazine's "Let's Make Freedom Really Ring" rally, an all across-the-nation bell ringing plan is on for this Fourth of July. In addition to bell ringing events planned by the local club and its members in observance of the historic date, include: the families of each Boys Club member to display the flag; to ask relatives, friends and neighbors, local merchants and business men to do likewise; volunteer to help ring church bells, school bells and assist in flag raising ceremonies. This date will also start activities of Boys Club for July, which will include space ball, tennis, softball and hiking.

Palmer Nichols, executive director of the local club, in commenting on the forthcoming celebration, said: "Loyalty and patriotism are an integral part of every Boys' Club program, the essence of which is to instill in all boys a sense of good citizenship. Therefore, we are happy to join in this bell-ringing celebration of the Fourth — reminiscent of the joy that greeted the first anniversary of the Declaration of Independence at Philadelphia in 1777."

Nichols pledged participation in this patriotic observance which promises to be a great American tradition.

Vincent Igo, pupblic relations director for the Copper Kettle Corp., is here for the opening of Holiday Inn, and will be here for three weeks. Igo is well known in Sedalia, he grew up in Beaman, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis V. Igo, Route 5, and was graduated from Smith-Cotton High School with the class of 1930.

Although his home is in Liberty, Mo., he travels all over the country doing exactly the same thing he is doing here. Whe he comes here he always cuts off over to Beaman, to see his parents, thus he was amazed to see what had happened to Sedalia during the years he had been away.

"It is a beautiful place" he commented, and added, "one of these days, when I retire, I want to come back here to live."

He has been with the Copper Kettle Corp., for the past year which is in conjunction with Holiday Inn, and has been opening new Holiday Inns all over the country. Prior to that he was public relations director for a steel company.

Public relations director for the whole system, he came here from Enid, Okla., where a new Holiday Inn has recently been opened and will go from here to St. Louis for the opening of another one. There will be four more open in the next five weeks, he said.

He has probably enjoyed this one more than any, however, because he is seeing many people he went to school with and other friends he hasn't had an opportunity to see for years.

New Dehydrated Foods Taste Good!

FT. STEWART, Ga. (AP)—The new dehydrated foods being tested by the Army are a lot lighter to carry and easier to store, but most important of all they taste good.

That's the verdict of some of the soldiers taking part in a special warfare school exercise known as Water Moccasin IV.

They like the dehydrated steak especially.

"It looks like a little piece of cardboard before it's prepared," said Army cook Alex C. Jacobs, "but afterward it looks like a steak again."

St. John's, Newfoundland, is closer to the British Isles than any other North American port.

Over 1 Million Cases of VD

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Syphilis, the "great pox" of medevial times, is resurging in the United States, and there may be as many as 1,200,000 hidden cases a top U.S. Public Health Service's venereal disease fighter said today.

Dr. M. Brittain Moore Jr., chief of the agency's VD Research Laboratory, Atlanta, said in a report prepared for the American Medical Association convention that the malady is being reported with increasing frequency throughout the country.

During 1962, he said, there were some 124,000 reported cases—including more than 21,000 in infectious, transmissible stages, the greatest number in the latter category since 1950.

Reasons for the rise in cases, he declared, include:

Rapid growth of cities; greatly increased mobility of populations; loss of strong family ties; international tensions; inadequacy of health and sex education; "declining morals;" and incomplete detection of carriers before they spread the disease.

Appreciation Expressed For Free Vacation

Mrs. Mildred Huff, who was the winner of the second "Fun in the Sun" vacation sponsored this year by the Sedalia retail merchants and the Chamber of Commerce, wrote the following letter to express her appreciation and that of her husband, Bert Huff, and their daughters.

"Chamber of Commerce
"Dear Sirs:

"I want to thank the Chamber of Commerce and the merchants of Sedalia for the wonderful 'Fun in the Sun' vacation my family and I enjoyed this past week at 'Our Resort.'

"We all enjoyed the swimming, fishing and boat riding. The fish were biting real good and we caught quite a lot. The owners of 'Our Resort' were wonderful people.

"I also want to thank David Routszong for the use of the car. This was the first time I ever won anything and believe me we all enjoyed every minute of it—so thanks again to everyone who helped make it possible."

Signed: "(Mildred Huff), Mr. and Mrs. Bert Huff and girls, Gravois Mills, Box 64."

Groping for Bright Future

Alaska Still a Paradox Land of Many Contrasts

By WARD T. SIMS

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — After four years of statehood and steady growth, Alaska still is a paradox, a land of staggering contrasts.

With a wealth of natural resources and a strategic location, the nation's largest state gropes for the bright future she knows is hers—and drags one foot along in a colorful past.

In her largest cities, small log cabins built during the state's brawling frontier days rub corners with modern homes and office buildings.

In the legislature, the need for freeways to handle burgeoning urban traffic has to be weighed carefully against the need for basic access roads and for harbor improvements at remote fishing villages.

Alaska is a land where mail is carried by jetliners, trucks, dog teams, skin boats and, sometimes, by a traveler who just happens to be going on to the next village.

It is a land where tuxedos brush against rough fur parkas, where the click of high heels cancels out the whisper of Eskimo mukluks on a city sidewalk.

And it is a land of incredible size—586,400 square miles of forests, grasslands and tundra populated by a relative handful of 230,000 persons.

When Alaska was admitted to the union, Jan. 3, 1959, it marked the end of what Alaskans still call the "century of neglect."

Since its purchase from Russia in 1867, Alaska had been treated by the federal government—in the eyes of most Alaskans—as a huge, unfeeling appendage, to be waggled at will, with no back talk.

Statehood gave Alaskans the opportunity to control their own resources, their own schools, their own highways.

The first four years of statehood were years of reorganization, the transformation of a territory into a state. The job has been almost completed. No one denies there were mistakes along the way.

Robert A. Baker, president of the Matanuska Valley Bank at Anchorage and of the Alaska State Chamber of Commerce, says:

"It is quite apparent that Alaska did not take full advantage of the impact statehood created. Our people were not fully prepared to welcome the visitors, many of whom would have settled or invested in Alaska.

"With the statehood announcement, we were on parade and did not quite dress for the occasion."

Much of the resentment of Alaskans against federal control under territorial status centered on the huge, rich salmon industry, which, they felt, had been riddled by over-exploitation and by ineffective control from offices thousands of miles away.

The gross value of the salmon fishery industry jumped from $72,442,000 in 1958 to $93 million last year, based on preliminary figures. This despite a disastrous season in the important Bristol Bay red salmon fishery.

New shrimp and crab fisheries have injected strength into the fishing industry in Alaska, giving salmon fishermen off-season work in place of idleness.

Another bright spot has been the oil industry which, amost overnight, has become one of the most dominant factors in the development of Alaska.

Since Jan. 1, 1958—approximately six months after the Richfield Oil Corp. brought in Alaska's first producing well south of Anchorage—the oil industry has invested more than $300 million in exploration development and payrolls in this new state.

The industry employs some 600 people on a full-time basis, a particularly important factor in Alaska, where harsh winters and the seasonal nature of the fishing industry have always sent unemployment figures soaring from November until May.

The only known commercial deposit of tin on the North American continent, located on the Seward Peninsula across the Bering Strait from Russia, is undeveloped because of a lack of transportation.

The same is true of other strategic metals located in the state—copper, iron and beryllium.

Japanese have shown interest in Alaska's mineral resources and have moved, along with domestic concerns, to utilize the vast spruce and hemlock forests of the southeast panhandle.

The federal government is often damned by Alaskans for its policies during territorial days, but they are well aware of Uncle Sam's prominent role in the state's present economic picture.

Federal payrolls, both civilian and military, pumped $225 million into Alaska in 1961, out of a gross personal income of $630 million.

The contrails of Russian jets are frequently seen along this ice curtain. Only last March, two Russian reconnaissance planes touched off a flurry of diplomatic activity with a quick pass over Alaskan territory in the Kuskokwim Bay area.

Alaskans shudder at the thought of their own vulnerability.

The backbone of the American defense effort in Alaska is a relatively light force of F102 fighter-interceptors.

With thousands upon thousands of acres of untouched wilderness, wildlife in profusion and scenery second to none in the world, the state has embarked on a vigorous tourist promotion program.

C. W. Snedden, publisher of the Fairbanks Daily News Miner, comments:

"There are those among us who appear to feel that some mysterious angel is going to watch over us, take care of us and lend us guidance should we come to a period of crisis.

"We must recognize our present handicaps and figure out ways to reduce these barriers."

ENLISTS — Leon A. Wells, Jr., a 1963 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon A. Wells, Sr. of 1706 South Lamine has entered the Air Force through the local Air Force recruiting office. He is undergoing basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex. Wells was an active member in the Sedalia Squadron, Civil Air Patrol for the past five years where he served as cadet commander. He received his certificate of proficiency from the Civil Air Patrol by passing through a series of nine courses of training and attending summer encampments at various Air Force bases. The Air Force recognized the certificate of proficiency earned by Wells by awarding him his first stripe (A-3c) at the time of enlistment.

Monsoon Survivors Will Go Back

CHITTAGONG, East Pakistan (AP)—"They'll go back. There's nowhere else for them to go."

The provincial police official gestured toward a group of survivors, waiting patiently in the monsoon rain for a private relief committee to give them food. Government relief had been slow and inadequate.

"They know there's always a danger of more cyclones but what else can they do but go back and rebuild and hope they won't be the ones hit next time?"

They had been driven from their homes by a cyclone that killed some 12,000 persons at the end of May—their wives or husbands, their children, their parents. Most were drowned by waves pushed in wind-whipped fury over some of the rice fields and villages along the Bay of Bengal.

The unprotected coastal villages form the fringe of one of the world's most densely populated areas, the Delta of East Pakistan. On the low, rich land at the multiple mouths of the Ganges and Brahmaputra rivers and adjacent coastal areas, 54 million persons live amid rice fields now flooded by the monsoon.

The pressure of population, expanding by more than a million a year, means that every inch of land is cultivated no matter how exposed to cyclones that periodically sweep up the Bay of Bengal.

Geography makes the bay a funnel with the neck in the oft-devastated area around Chittagong, East Pakistan's major port located between Calcutta and Rangoon.

The brick houses of Chittgong offer shelter from winds of more than 120 miles an hour that bend the city's metal utility poles. The high land by the port means safety when tidal waves twist steel piers. But the farmers have no place to hide.

Theirs is a simple, almost primitive land, close to nature and therefore vulnerable to its furies.

The climate is warm—temperatures now during the monsoon range from 75 to 90—and few clothes re required. Hen wear lungis wrapped around their waists like sarongs and occasionally shirts. Women wear simple saris. Children often wear nothing.

Shakeup At University Of Americas

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A ban-the-beard campaign and an order that all students wear shoes has weeded out beatniks and boosted the enrollment of the English-language University of the Americas.

The "improved image" doubled enrollment of Mexicans and increased the over-all total, says new President D. Ray Lindley.

The University of the Americas, formerly Mexico City College, ranks with the Sorbonne in Paris as one of two schools outside the United States annually enrolling more than 1,000 American students.

But things were going badly last year when Dr. Lindley moved from the presidency of Texas Christian University of Fort Worth to take over here.

"Banning beards and bare feet was just a minor situation that had to be taken care of, but it made headlines," says Dr. Lindley. "I found that although most of our students dressed adequately, we had a few beatniks who were giving the school a bad image. Just a few can distort the whole picture. So I issued the orders.

"There were protests, but most complied. But then I found that many insisted on going barefoot even though beardless. We had to expel one student who refused to wear shoes. He was an American.

"The immediate result was surprising. Our Mexican enrollment began to jump. Parents here were reluctant to pay our dues, which are higher than those of Mexican universities, when they saw bearded, barefoot beatniks on the campus. When they were eliminated, the Mexicans were willing to send their sons and daughters to the university."

That is one major goal of the new program—to lure more Latin American students. Dr. Lindley hopes in time to have at least 50 per cent of the students from Latin America.

The enrollment now includes students from 10 Latin-American countries, 5 European, 3 Asian, and from Canada, but half are from the United States.

"In an area where the Communists are making a determined thrust to capture the educational institutions, we are a small but significant beachhead projecting a powerful image of a free economy and a free way of life," Dr. Lindley says.

Kennedy To Be Safe In Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Kennedy visits Europe he's going to be just about as safe as if he stayed home.

In fact, he would stay home if there were any question about his safety—the U.S. Secret Service would see to that.

The Secret Service, by law, is charged with protecting the President anywhere. And it does so in shifts around the clock, at a palace or embassy abroad as it does at the White House in Washington.

In this country, the Secret Service has the sole responsibility for safeguarding the President, although it also calls on local and state police and occasionally the military for assistance. On trips to other countries, the foreign counterpart of the Secret Service is responsible technically for the security of the President. But actually it is the Secret Service that sets forth the security requirements, working in close cooperation with its opposite number abroad.

When a President travels in other lands, the sharp-eyed, well-built young men constantly by his side, draw exclamations from crowds. Foreigners always figure they are FBI men or G-Men. But the FBI has no specific authority for guarding the President.

Congress put this power in the hands of the Secret Service years ago. The Secret Service is an agency of U. S. Treasury Department, and one of its other major duties is running down counterfeiters.

A special Secret Service detail is assigned to the White House under Gerald A. Behn, a young looking veteran who goes back to the days of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

As on all presidential trips the one to Europe which begins Saturday night is being checked out carefully by an advance party which includes Secret Service agents. These agents and plenty of others—the White House doesn't wish to advertise the exact number — will accompany Kennedy when he starts his 10-day travels to West Germany, Ireland, Britain and Italy.

Probably a flying freighter will take along a huge, specially built and equipped car for the Secret Service as well as Kennedy's limousine with a removable metal or plastic top.

The Secret Service car has running boards and hand grips. In a motorcade, agents are hopping on and off constantly and racing ahead to run alongside Kennedy's car. The two cars travel almost bumper to bumper.

At the airports, along the roads and streets, at public buildings, and all other places the President will visit, Secret Service and local security agents will have combed over the entire route in advance.

At ceremonies, representatives of the press probably will be no more than twenty feet away. And at times even closer. The general public may not be much farther away. In fact, some people are likely to see Kennedy close up. He is a gregarious kind of person who seldom passes up the chance to wander over to a crowd behind a fence or other barricade and walk along with a smile and outstretched hand, offering hand clasps and sometimes yielding to requests for autographs.

Or he might get right into the crowd and mingle. This rather worries the Secret Service, because it never knows for sure what the President is going to do about joining the crowd. That's the kind of man he is.

BACKGROUND OF THE NEWS — AP SPECIAL REPORT

Aims And Images of US Eroded By Red Activity

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

In the midst of a noisy religious riot, two plastic bombs explode. Nobody knows who threw them, but people are killed.

Bazaar thugs and bullies move in on religious demonstrations which then turn violent and political. Nobody knows who hired the thugs, but people are killed.

In sensitive areas of the Eastern world, the aims and image of the United States are being eroded by events beyond American control. Varied elements are involved, but it seems a safe bet that the Communists play a big part, agitating and confusing, taking the fullest advantage of local strains and passions.

Iran is the cornerstone of the U.S.-supported Central Treaty Organization, which forms with Turkey the northern tier of defenses against Soviet Communist designs in the oil-rich Middle East and Asia.

South Viet Nam is the scene of a desperate war against communism on the rim of Southeast Asia, with the United States deeply committed, financially and militarily, to holding back the Red tide.

There may be no direct connection. But each case serves as a reminder of how local issues can be exploited to a point where the very foundations of Western Cold War policy can be menaced.

What happened in Tehran? Briefly it was this:

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi, with the overwhelming support of the nation expressed in a plebiscite, is pushing a program to break up big estates for the benefit of small farmers, to sell government-owned factories for repayment of landlords, to amend election laws, nationalize forests, establish a battle against illiteracy and other reforms—including emancipation of Iran's women.

This is disliked by many big landlords. It is opposed by mullahs—priests—of the Shitte Moslem sect of which the shah himself and the majority of Iranians are members.

And there are the Communists: the members of the reorganized, revitalized Tudeh party, now strong among industrial and communications workers in the forward-looking hydroelectric and other big projects with which the shah had hoped to modernize the whole country.

What happened in Viet Nam? Briefly it was this:

On May 8, eve of the day many Asians celebrate as the birthday of Buddha, young Buddhists at Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon, clashed violently with government troops.

The Buddhists were protesting alleged discrimination against them by the government of Roman Catholic President Ngo Dinh Diem. Hue is his birthplace, and seat of the Catholic archdiocese of his brother, Archbishop Ngo Dinh Thuc. About 80 per cent of South Viet Nam's 14 millions are Buddhists.

Suddenly two plastic bombs exploded in the midst of the rioting. The government—and others—suspected agitators of the Communist Viet Cong, whose guerillas are trying to envelop the whole country. When the rioting finally was over, authorities counted 11 dead.

The United States has been hopeful of rallying public opinion in South Viet Nam more solidly behind the regime. There had been progress among people weary of bloodshed, of stab raids by the Viet Cong, or murders and plunder and terror.

But the population is predominantly Buddhist.

Buddhists have been killed during a clash with forces representing the Diem government. That could do much to destroy what has been accomplished up to now in imbuing the population with a will to fight against the Communist invaders from the Northern regime of Ho Chiminh.

And it would hurt the U. S. image badly not only in Viet Nam but in other predominantly Buddhist areas of Asia.

Alaska, with an area of about 586,400 square miles, is the largest of the 50 states.

Sues Hotel For Injuries Suffered In Conga Line

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"A fat, bald and flat-footed man like me should not have tried the dance," Benjamin Satz admitted in court.

But Satz, 58, asked a Superior Court jury Thursday to award him $253,600 damages for a kick he suffered when he joined a conga line at Hotel Flamingo in Las Vegas.

Satz claimed he was kicked in the left leg by one of the chorines Aug. 14, 1959 and subsequently developed phlebitis.

The hotel contends it wasn't negligent. It says Satz a furniture dealer from Long Beach, Calif., assumed the risk when he joined the conga line.

Department Store Sales Up 14% In 10th District

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Department stores in the 10th Federal Reserve District reported a 14 per cent increase in sales last week over the corresponding week of 1962.

Nationally, sales were up 13 per cent.

Joplin and Kansas City had increases of 25 per cent, Wichita 22, Oklahoma City 21, Lincoln 20, Tulsa 15, Omaha 8, Topeka and Albuqerque 6, Denver 5, and down town Kansas City 1.

St. Joseph was unchanged.

New Insurance Policy To Protect Grain

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department announced it will be protected by a blanket insurance policy against loss on surplus grain stored in commercial warehouses, starting July 1.

Heretofore, protection has been by surety bonds supplied by individual storage concerns.

A decision to obtain increased protection was made last spring after the department's difficulties with Billie Sol Estes, west Texas financier convicted of fraud. Estes stored large amounts of government grain, but no government losses were suffered from his operations.

The blanket policy will be provided by the Farmers Elevator Mutual Insurance Co. of Des Moines at an annual premium of $742,765. The cost will be assessed against 10,460 warehouse concerns which have agreed to store government grain.

The policy will protect the department against losses up to $2 million at each facility, with a maximum aggregate liability of $50 million.

Kennedy Gives $1,000 For Movie 'PT 109'

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—President Kennedy has sent a $1,000 personal check to a committee planning a benefit premiere for the movie "PT 109", a film about the President's World War II exploits.

The benefit at the Beverly Hilton Hotel July 2 will raise funds for a child mental health center named in honor of the President's brother, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., who was killed in World War II.

Sedalia Family Enjoys Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. John Silsby, Sedalia, Route 4, are enjoying life this summer and don't expect to be back home until September or October.

For 27 years her husband milked cows twice a day and hauled milk once a day, but this year he decided it was time to see some of the country, so he sold the milk routes, leased the cows and rented the farm — then he, his wife, Mavis, and his son, Mike, 19, started out with a house trailer on a vacation that will take them many places to see many sights.

Right now they have parked the trailer for two weeks in Kansas and are working in the wheat while Mavis is visiting all the interesting things that she hears about, after she gets her dishes done.

One of the places she visited was the oldest authentic prehistoric burial grounds of the Indians in the middlewest where there were 146 bodies buried in one spot not more than 30 feet square and the bones, she said are perfectly preserved.

They plan to go on the Dakotas, Yellowstone, Washington, California, and wherever else their wanderlust might take them.

Sunday afternoon drivers with their families who want something else besides scenery to look at, may find the Coin club display a worthwhile attraction. Entrance to the Fairgrounds is a block west of the main gate on Sixteenth street.

Visitors will find it most convenient to park near the Commercial building or the grandstand a short distance north of the Agriculture building. Play-Off Is Today

Palmer in 3-Way Tie For National Open Golf Title

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP)—Favorite Arnold Palmer, Julius Boros and young Jacky Cupit fought their way through gale winds and a weird maze of bungled opportunities Saturday and tied for the 63rd National Open Golf Championship with 293, the highest winning score in 38 years.

The three will play off over 18 holes Sunday for the title.

In one of the most dramatic finishes in the long history of this blue ribbon event, Cupit sent a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole spinning past the cup.

It cut the corner and stopped six inches away. If it had fallen, the little Texan would have been the champion.

Instead, he, Palmer and Boros, the latter a 43-year-old former champion who could be the oldest ever to hold the title, meet in the 18-hole playoff Sunday, beginning at 1 p.m. EST.

It is the second straight open playoff for Palmer, beaten by Jack Nicklaus at Oakmont, Pa., a year ago. Nicklaus, his game gone sour, failed to make the 36-hole cutoff this year.

This is the first 3-man playoff for the championship since Ben Hogan, George Fazio and Lloyd Mangrum came head-to-head at Merion, Pa., in 1950 and Hogan, his legs shattered by an automobile accident the year before, won the second of his four crowns.

The final two rounds Saturday—played in gusty 40 mile-per-hour winds over the knobby old course at The Country Club where Francis Ouimet won the title 50 years ago—turned out to be a weird succession of blown chances.

Palmer blew an easy, 20-inch putt on the next-to-last hole and even his faithful Arnie's army despaired of his chances at this point.

But the strong boy from Latrobe, Pa., stormed back to get a par on the 18th hole for a final round 74 after skying to a 77 in the morning, without a single birdie.

Cupit, with the championship almost in his pocket, took a double bogey six at the 71st hole, opening the door for the three-way tie.

On this 365-yard hole, a scene of high drama, the gritty Texan drove onto the side of a bunker, hit his second short and pitched into the wire-like rough at the back of the green. He putted from the fringe, ran six feet past and missed coming back.

He wound up with final rounds of 76-75, after taking the lead at the 54-hole mark, and then played the final hole like a champion—never once wavering.

Boros lost three strokes to par early on the back nine but rallied with birdies at the 70th and 71st and a par at the 72nd. He had final rounds of 76-72.

The 293 score is the highest to win a U.S. Open since dark horse Sam Parks won at Oakmont with 299 in 1935. Since then four Opens have been won with scores of 287.

Even Ouimet would have finished in the money. Playing with wood clubs a half century ago, he scored 304, when he tied Britons Harry Vardon and Ted Ray in 1913, and then beat them in a similar three-way playoff.

Bruising Pace For Last Fight

A bruising wrestling pace is assured Tuesday night (June 25) on the final indoor ring card of the season at the Agriculture Building.

Appearance of Rock Hunter or Bob Geigel alone would guarantee a heavy measure of rugged action. Together, they can be doubly dangerous.

The two free-swinging, brawling ring workmen will have a solid assignment. They are matched against two competent, equally aggressive Missourians, Sonny Myers and Larry Hamilton.

Myers has been a mainstay on the Midlands wrestling scene for over a dozen years. Hamilton has blossomed into a powerful 250-pound heavyweight who is at home in brawling action. Called the Missouri Mauler, the relentless Hamilton has a wide assortment of holds but much prefers to rough his way to victory.

Myers is particularly adept at the Japanese sleeper and will be trying to make Hunter his No. 1 target. Hunter lifted Myers' Central States title a few weeks back and the Missouri pro hasn't had an opportunity to regain it.

Hunter is a stocky, muscular battler who conditions for his matches by lifting weights. A violent contestant, he is the perfect teammate for Geigel, another well - proportioned, hard - hitting athlete.

Steve Bolas, one half the youthful Canadian tag team that has risen to prominence in this section, will swing into action Tuesday against Roy Collins, the hardy Georgian who is a good test for any wrestler.

Separate events pit Myers against Geigel, Hamilton against Hunter.

The second game at 8:30 p.m. saw O'Connor shut out Boeing CEBAC 7-0 in five innings. Boeing CEBAC had five hits in the game, but was unable to score. O'Connor's seven runs came on only three hits.

S and M, Redwing Win On Friday

S and M Athletic Goods and undefeated Redwing Pest Control were the winning teams in Friday night's Connie Mack play at the Liberty Park baseball diamond.

In the first game, Redwing whipped VFW 14-4, behind the five-hit pitching of Mike Riley and an 11-hit Redwing attack. Riley led Redwing's hitting with a single and two doubles in four trips to the plate.

VFW collected three runs in the fifth and one in the seventh, but was no match for the hard-hitting Redwing team.

The winning pitcher for Redwing was Mike Riley, with Steve Young taking the loss for VFW. Redwing is the only Connie Mack team that is undefeated for the season.

The second game, a tie much of the way, came out in favor of S and M Athletic Goods, which slipped past Broadway Realty 5-4.

In extra innings, Terry Pummil and John Miller hooked up in a pitchers' battle, with Pummil coming out on top, taking the win for S and M. The score was tied 2-2 in the second, tied 4-4 in the fifth, and remained knotted until the bottom of the eighth when S and M pushed across the winning run.

There were two double plays in the game, one by each team. S and M's double play came on a smash to Pummil on the mound. He threw to Nagel at second, and Nagel relayed to Swisher at first for the second out. A line drive to Miller, who doubled up Nagel off second base accounted for Broadway's double play.

Clay Dalrymple drove in the Phils' first run with a single in the fourth after Johnny Callison beat out a bunt single and Roy Sievers singled.

Craig had fought it out with Culp all afternoon and struck out seven. It was Craig's ninth straight defeat and his 11th of the year. He has not won since April 29.

Games Go To Elks And Lions

Elks and Lions were victorious in Friday night's Little League majors action at Liberty Park, with a pitchers' battle deciding the result in the night's opener.

Elks won the first game 5-2 over Moose, in the old fashioned pitchers' duel. Ben Embry issued ten strikeouts, allowed four hits and three walks in taking the win, while Ronnie Hayes had seven strikeouts, only one walk, and seven hits, taking the loss.

Don Crank slugged two homers for Elks in the opener, with Monte Finley pounding another for Elks and Larry Newbill hitting a homer for Moose.

The second game saw Lions whip Adco 8-1. Pat Robinson was the winning pitcher, with Wayne Goosen taking the loss on the mound.

In action in the A's at Centennial Park, Adco beat Lions 11-4, with Fred Bodenhamer chalking up the win for Adco and Danny Wilson taking the loss.

The second game saw Elks pile up 15 runs and Moose five, for Moose's fifth loss of the year. David Green was the winning hurler in that game. Jamie Wise marked down the pitching loss.

Optimist completely overpowered Elks 23-4 in the "C" league game at Housel Park. Don Tatman was the winning pitcher, with 11 strikeouts. Steve Bingaman was the losing pitcher.

Gene Hamby with 12 strikeouts, all the strikeouts possible in a four inning game, was the winning pitcher for Elks as they shut out Optimist 10-0 in "B" team play. Young Hamby allowed no hits in that game, and issued four walks. Craig Cumberland was the losing hurler for Optimist.

WITH fewer than 50 entries, Sedalia's Soap Box Derby might lose its franchise for next year's race. But it's not an established fact that there will be no race. As a matter of fact, Sedalia isn't the only city with less than 50 entries, and to date there have been no reports of any other city with 25 entries losing its derby franchise.

The limiting factor in the sanctioning of derbies is space available at Derbytown, the camp near Akron, Ohio, where the local winners stay while racing in the All-American Soap Box Derby. The capacity there is 250. This year there are 241 cities running Soap Box Derbies, so the camp will be under its capacity. Next year is difficult to foresee, but there is a chance that cities whose derbies have a small number of entries may be dropped.

Jefferson City is running a Soap Box Derby this year, its first in the past few years, and according to the Jefferson City Post-Tribune, the city has 25 entries. So apparently the National Soap Box Derby officials aren't too strict about the number of boys in the race, so long as there is really a race, and not just six or seven boys racing for a $500 savings bond and a trip to Akron.

Three years ago Sedalia started its annual Soap Box Derby with over 50 entries. Since then, however, the number has diminished. Part of this can be blamed on the fact that nearby cities have started their own derby runs, and part of it can be blamed, perhaps, on a not too intensive campaign to have local youngsters try for the prize money.

It may be that the Jaycees, who have promoted the event the past three years, will have to gain additional support from the local merchants, civic clubs and others in sponsoring the race here, providing the necessary materials. The cost of materials for a racer is practically nil in comparison with what a sponsor does for a youngster—and it is deductible for tax purposes as a promotion benefitting the sponsor's business.

—o—

IT appears that Sedalia's 1962-63 All-Star basketball and football player from Hubbard High School is going to get a chance to show his wares off at the University of Missouri. Glen Whitney, who has done so well at Hubbard with the Tigers there, has been at M.U. and took his tests which may win for him a scholarship in athletics.

Whitney is intelligent, above average in his class, and should be well capable of passing the necessary tests which ean gain him assistance in attending college. His desires to go forward have not only been shown in high school competition, but those to advance both educational and athletics wise in college.

He had several invitations to smaller colleges, but he was encouraged by a number of Sedalians interested in seeing him go higher, to try himself at the university level at Columbia.

If he is selected and awarded a scholarship, I am sure he will produce in such a way he will make his coach of several years, Harry Browder, assistant principal at Hubbard, very proud.

His moving up to the university will be the first of local Negro students to attend the University of Missouri. It is well fitting that such an athlete close out high school athletics competition at C. C. Hubbard in such a way. This spring ended the athletic competition for Hubbard and those boys who desire to continue in athletics will not be working for his place on the Smith-Cotton Tigers teams.

THE Kansas City Chiefs, formerly the Dallas Texans, have a new and official insignia. The club is represented by an Indian warrior, tomahawk in one hand, football in the other, taking gigantic steps across the outlines of six states, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Iowa and Arkansas. The colors will be red and gold.

The new insignia bears quite a bit of resemblance to the one which the Texans had before they became the Chiefs. The only differences being that the Texans were represented by a gun-toting cowboy taking a leap across the outlines of the state of Texas.

As time goes on, the new insignia for the Chiefs will be available through the usual sources, pennants, T-shirts, decals and so on. We hope that the Indian warrior will continue his leaping strides through the outlines of ours and the neighboring states.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—Dennis Ralston, 20-year-old junior at Southern California, won the National Collegiate Athletic Association's 1963 singles tennis championship Saturday.

Ralston, seeded first in this year's tournament, defeated third-seeded Marty Riessen of Northwestern 9-7, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1 at Princeton University's Brokaw courts.

Both are members of the U.S. Davis Cup team.

It was the second disappointment for the broad-shouldered Riessen. He lost in last year's final at Stanford to Osuna.

Sedalian Is Doing Well In Baseball

Miller, Mo. — William Brown, 15, son of William F. Brown, 1102 New England Drive, "is fast, can hit and run. He has a lot of hustle, quick hands, and can go back on pop flies," states Mickey Owen.

Like other boys at the school, Bill felt a bit nervous the first time he was introduced over the student - operated public address system, with identification of his home town and other personal comment. But that has worn off, and the boys all take pride in hearing their names and home towns mentioned.

Owen, who was the National League all-star game catcher for four straight years, 1941 through 1944, says "baseball must be learned on the playing field, and we have the facilities and staff to teach it. We stress sportsmanship, discipline, character and physical development. Every boy who leaves here holds his head a little higher than when he arrived."

Bill plays at least two games a day, following a daily practice session on the instructional field in the morning. Here Owen personally instructs the boys in the development of their batting, fielding, sliding, throwing, and catching techniques, with specialized instruction for each position. He is aided by his patented "Add-A-Weight" bat which can be weighted to any desired amount through the addition of lead segments in various sizes.

At Wimbledon on Monday

McKinley Will Make New Bid for Title

LONDON (AP)—Chuck McKinley, all-action American tennis star, steps on to the Wimbledon courts Monday in a new bid to win back the men's title for the United States.

The tireless jack-in-the-box from St. Louis is seeded fourth in what looks like the most open men's singles at Wimbledon for years.

Rod (The Rocket) Laver, the Australian redhead who has run through all opposition to the title for the last two years, has turned professional.

"It's a psychological boost to know that Rod is out of the way," McKinley said. "He had that title wrapped up almost before he started. I feel now I'm in with a really good chance."

It is eight years since a native-born American, Tony Trabert, won the Wimbledon crown. Since then Australia's domination of the title has been broken only once—by Alex Olmedo, a Peruvian who qualified for the United States Davis Cup team—in 1959.

McKinley first hit Wimbledon in a big way in 1960, when he reached the final. Laver then outclassed him in three straight sets.

Last year the American, handicapped by a leg injury, was sensationally toppled by Mike Hann of Britain in an early round.

Inevitably, Australian stars dominate the seeding list. Roy Emerson, lean and wiry Davis Cup star, is the top seed.

Manuel Santana of Spain, who gave Laver a run for his money in last year's semifinals, is seeded No. 2, with Ken Fletcher, another Australian, No. 3.

Then comes McKinley, followed by Martin Mulligan of Australia, last year's defeated finalist; Pierre Darmon of France, Jan Erik Lundquist of Sweden and Mike Sangster of Britain.

McKinley can expect to have to overcome two strong Australians—John Fraser, brother of former Wimbledon champion Neale Fraser, and Mulligan—before achieving the semifinal.

The odds favor an Australian girl winning the women's crown for the first time. Margaret Smith is top seed, with Lesley Turner, her curly-haired teammate from Australia, second.

The women's title, too, is open. The reigning queen, Mrs. Karen Hantze Susman of San Angelo, Tex., is expecting a baby and is not defending her crown.

American hopes will be on Darlene Hard of Long Beach, Calif., who has been near to winning the title consistently for the last eight years. Now she says she is trying for the last time.

The committee has seeded Miss Hard fourth, with Britain's Mrs. Ann Haydon Jones ahead of her at the No. 3 spot.

Sedalia Team Comes in Last In Tournament

Sedalia's inter-city golf team placed last in their tourney Thursday at the Jefferson City Country Club.

The local golfers from the Sedalia Country Club had 218½ points, coming in behind first place Columbia, Fulton, and Jefferson City.

The day was unpleasant for the locals not only in results, but also in the weather. The match was once interrupted by a downpour of rain.

The medalist for Sedalia was Ralph Walker, who shot 77. Sedalia's high point man was Dick Bigelow, with 30 points.

The fourth and final match in the inter-city tournament will be July 9 at Fulton

New York Takes Doubleheader

BOSTON (AP) — New York took a day-night doubleheader from Boston Saturday, Elston Howard's 13th home run deciding the night game 3-2 after Whitey Ford won his 10th of the season in the afternoon, 6-5.

Relief pitchers Bill Kunkel, Marshall Bridges and Hal Reniff were instrumental in the sweep, which moved the first-place Yankees 1½ games in front of Chicago in the American League race.

Kunkel, who took over for starter Bill Stafford in the fourth inning of the second game after Stafford injured his groin in a slide into third base, stopped Boston effectively, though Bridges came on for the final out.

Reniff allowed only two singles in the three innings he pitched in the day game.

New York helped its own cause considerably by executing six double plays in the two games. Joe Pepitone and Johnny Blanchard homered for the Yanks in the opener.

New York had a 3-0 lead before the Red Sox got two runs in the sixth inning of the nightcap on a double, two singles and a fielder's choice.

Three Home Run Help Twins Top Baltimore, 3-1

ST. PAUL-Minneapolis (AP) — Zoilo Versalles' two home runs and one by Vic Power propelled Minnesota to a 3-1 victory over Baltimore Saturday as reliable Bill Dailey came out of the bullpen again to bail the Twins out of trouble.

Dailey continued his fantastic relief performances, gaining credit for his third save in Minnesota's last four games and his seventh of the year.

Dailey replaced Jim Perry, who got the win and is 7-4, in the eighth when Perry jammed his right thumb knocking down a line drive.

The Orioles had runners on second and third with one out. Dailey got Russ Snyder to chop a dribbler in front of the plate, and got Brooks Robinson on a called third strike. He then got Baltimore out in order in the ninth.

Cards Hang On to Slim Lead in NL

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis maintained its slim National League lead on Charlie James' sixth-inning home run as the Cardinals defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 Saturday.

The San Francisco Giants, in second place, beat Milwaukee 3-0 to remain a half-game out.

Bob Gibson, credited with his fifth straight victory, needed help from Bobby Shantz in the seventh and Ron Taylor in the ninth. Gibson, now 6-3, allowed seven hits and struck out five.

Tommy Davis lined his eighth homer to left in the second, putting Los Angeles ahead, 1-0. But Dodger starter Nick Willhite's second balk forced in the tying run in the fifth, after the Cards got men on second and third with Julian Javier's single, an error and a sacrifice.

James hit his towering home run to left with none on. It was his sixth of the year.

Colts Are Losers As Reds Take 5th

CINCINNATI (AP) — John Tsitouris, elevated from bullpen status to starter on only June 9, racked up his third starting victory as against one defeat Saturday as he hurled the Cincinnati Reds to their fifth straight triumph, a 3-0 decision over the Houston Colts. Tsitouris' over-all record now is 3-2.

It was the second straight 3-0 shutout for the Reds against the Colts.

Bob Bruce, who pitched a one-hitter against the Reds on April 26, was nicked for all of the Cincinnati runs.

Pete Rose, who got three hits for the Reds, scored the first two runs. Gordon Coleman scored him with a single in the first after Rose had beat out a bunt and gone to second on a passed ball. Rose tallied again in the third on a walk, a stolen base and Bada Pinson's double.

Tsitouris drove in the third run with a sacrifice fly.

Mayo Heads J Bar H Rodeo List

Don Mayo, a wiry 23-year-old cowboy, who leads the race for pro rodeo's bareback bronc riding championship this year, sparks the roster of early entries for Camdenton's 13th annual J Bar H Rodeo, slated Saturday, June 29, through Saturday, July 6.

Mayo, from Denver, Colo., will be among other top cowboys in pursuit of some $19,000 in prize money that awaits winners at the week-long contest's conclusion.

The prize money total consists of $14,000 in purse money plus entry fees from the contestants themselves.

Competitive events on tap are saddle and bareback bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, and bull riding. Rodeo livestock will be furnished by Hoss Inman, of Lamar, Colo.

Now in his third pro season, the sandy-haired Mayo came out of the unlikely cowboy country of central Iowa, at Grinnell, in 1961, to finish sixth for the bareback riding crown. Last year, he spurred his way to title runner-up, missing the throne by a scant $1,500 in winnings.

Undaunted, Mayo grabbed the event's national lead at the start of this year and has been in command ever since. He has an almost $2,000 edge in latest ratings, with a total of $9,043.

White Sox Top Cleveland With Slim 2-1 Tally

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chicago southpaw Gary Peters teamed with Jim Brosnan to hold Cleveland to four hits as the White Sox beat the Indians 2-1 on Tom McCraw's double Saturday.

Peters limited the tribe to one hit until Willie Tasby slammed his first homer of the season over the right field fence with none on in the eighth inning. Al Luplow followed with a single and reliever Jim Brosnan replaced Peters on the mound. He choked off the rally.

Loser Jim Grant retired 12 in a row before Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Floyd Robinson's single and Hansen's double.

Chicago jumped on Grant for another run in the seventh. Pete Ward led off with a single, the 15th straight game in which he has hit safely, and took second on a wild pitch. McCraw doubled Ward home.

Giants Shut Out Milwaukee 3-0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Billy O'Dell won his 10th game with a two-hitter Saturday, holding Milwaukee to two singles while San Francisco eased out a 3-0 victory.

Successive singles by Chuck Hiller, Willie Mays and Willie McCovey in the sixth gave the Giants their only run off Bob Shaw. They added two more off relief man Hank Fischer in the ninth on Ed Bailey's single with the bases loaded.

Denis Menke singled with one out in the second for the Braves and Frank Bolling singled with two gone in the third. Willie Mays made a sensational catch on Joe Torre's drive to deep center, ending the third.

Pittsburgh Snaps Cubs' Four-Game Winning Streak

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Friend and the Pittsburgh Pirates, aided by Dick Schofield's two-run homer, stopped the Chicago Cubs 3-0 Saturday.

The loss snapped Chicago's four-game winning streak. It was only the second Pittsburgh victory over the Cubs in seven games this season.

Friend scattered nine hits and recorded his ninth victory against five losses while Dick Ellsworth suffered his sixth setback against nine triumphs.

The only run the Pirates needed came in the first inning on a single by Bob Bailey, a stolen base and a single by Roberto Clemente. Two more runs came in the third when Bailey walked and Schofield clubbed his first home run of the year.

The Davis woman is expecting a baby in about six weeks. She was given credit for 52 days spent in the Pettis County jail.

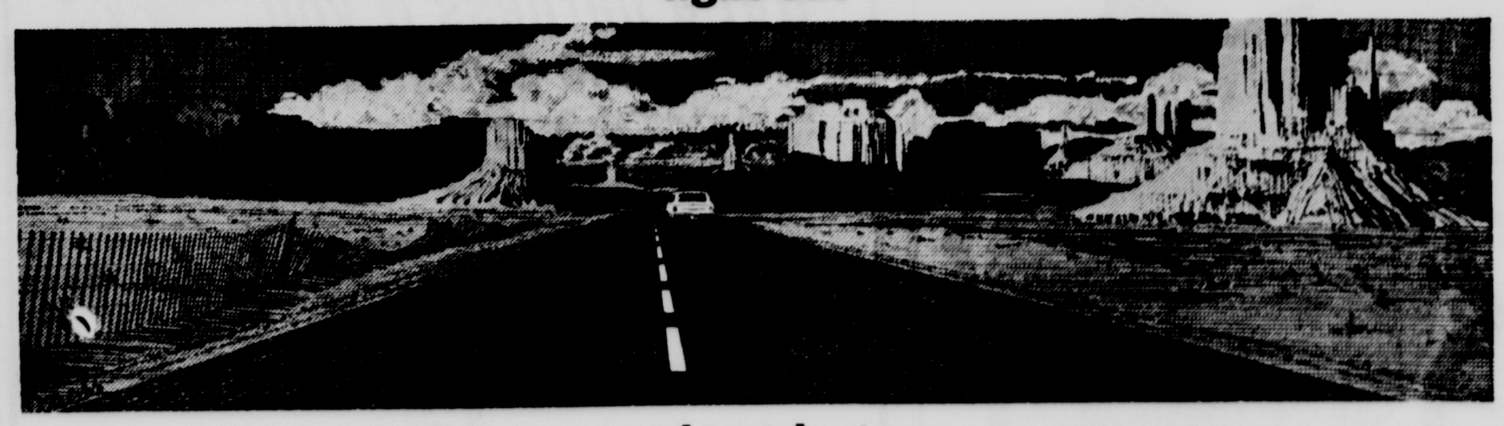
Chevy II Nova 400 6-Passenger Station Wagon

Load up,

light out



and get lost...

Chevy II Wagons—The heft of a suitcase. The rustle of a road map. There's something about one of these spruce, surprisingly spacious wagons that can turn even the routine preparations into a happy part of your trip.

Take that old bugaboo of packing, for instance. No bother. With the kind of room you get in that easy-loading cargo compartment, you can just about toss things in any old whichway and come out with space to spare. The load won't dampen the spirits of the spunky 6-cylinder engine either. It just hums along passing up gas pumps (there's also a choice of an even thriftier 4 in most models) like it didn't have a care in the world. Fact is, it has far fewer cares than most engines—being built with the special knack Chevrolet engineers have for dependability and ease of maintenance.

Like a car with ginger—without a lot of needless gingerbread? Your dealer's got a full line of Chevy II's to pick from. Why not drop down and check now while both the trading and the traveling are especially good?

And maybe it'd be a good idea to leave a note for the milkman on the way out, just in case you find yourself tempted to get lost some place before you get back.

Blemishes Mar Perfection In Paradise of Hawaii

By ROBERT MYERS

HONOLULU (AP)—Hawaii the state and Hawaii the state of mind are drawing farther apart—yet both measure up to the vision of a beautiful world.

Spurred by statehood and the birth of the jet age, the islands have stepped quickly into the world community as an active patrner. Their business development, people and culture are making themselves felt on both sides of the Pacific basin.

Hawaii accepted statehood and the States accepted Hawaii with little strain. Only a few residents—and the tourists—still refer to the other 49 as "the States." They are quickly put in their place. The proper and promoted name is "mainland."

Admission to the Union brought one important political change. The governor was picked by the voters, not by the president. Hawaii gained representation in Congress by senators and representatives instead of by a single, nonvoting delegate.

The 50th state is two places—three if you count the dream world. It is Honolulu, a thriving metropolis finding and taking its place among the world's great cities. And it is the neighbor islands, the often overlooked, mostly undeveloped areas.

Honolulu on Oahu is a city of more than half a million people—five-sixths of Hawaii's total population. It is like many cities with tall buildings, clogged streets and crowded department stores—and slums.

Leave Oahu and the picture changes. The six inhabited neighbor islands feature the quiet Polynesian life, although the stirrings of the modern world are beginning to be felt. The ukeleles are strummed with sincerity there—not for strict commercial reasons as at Waikiki.

The new governor, John A. Burns, a Democrat, took office last December.

Self-help is the key to his program.

"We have relied too long on outside assistance, from the federal government, the territorial or state administrations," Burns said. "It's time that our people began doing things for themselves. We must unleash the great potential that Hawaii's people have."

The Hawaiian economy is built on a four-pronged foundation—sugar, pineapple, the military and tourism. There are other businesses such as clothing, papaya, canned nuts and scrap metal but their influence so far is minor.

Economist Thomas Hitch of Hawaii's First National Bank estimates that in dollar value sugar, pineapple, defense spending and visitors account for 90 per cent of outside money coming into the state. This just about offsets, according to Hitch, the high import rate of the islands where 80 per cent of all consumer goods must be shipped in.

The heavy flow of goods highlights Hawaii's dependence on surface shipping. Most economists and government officials tend to play this down but it is the islands' Achille's heel. A shipping strike—there have been three in the past two years—causes economic and psychological havoc.

Economically, the heavy push in Hawaii is in military and tourism. Uncle Sam spent $418 million in Hawaii last year, most of it on Oahu where all but a few small military installations are located. About 125,000 of the state's 632,772 population belong to military families.

Another 25,000 civilians receive their paychecks from the federal government.

The most spectacular boom since statehood has taken place in tourism with a rise of nearly 120 per cent. But with the increase has come a general change in the complexion of the visitor.

Until the mid-1950s, most Hawaii tourists were wealthy. The islands were out of financial reach of the casual vacationer. The carriage trade still comes but with it now is the economy tourist.

This is the quantity—the man and his wife who buy a $1,000 ticket for two including transportation, meals and a hotel, island bus tours and a few other extras. They may arrive in Honolulu with $50 or $100 spending money for souvenirs and trinkets for the folks back home.

The state ended last year on a strong economic note. Construction had its second-best dollar year in history — $263.7 million. This was below the record volume of $285 million in 1960 but far above the 1958 mark of $175 million.

One element always mentioned favorably about the islands is the ability of the races to live together in apparent harmony. Tolerance on the surface is a reality, although there are clubs which Orientals can't join and there is a quiet undercurrent of anti-Caucasian feeling in some quarters. This latter condition can be found, for example, in newspaper want ads listing apartments "for AJA—Americans of Japanese ancestry—couple only."

The 1960 census showed a shifting racial balance which some time in the next two years will make the Caucasian — or "haole" as he is called—the largest ethnic group. In 1950, there were 184,611 Japanese and 114,793 haoles. The last census showed 203,455 Japanese and 202,230 Caucasians. Chinese, Filipinos, Hawaiians, Koreans and others follow far behind.

Living in Hawaii has many advantages — good weather, unlimited recreational facilities, friendly people and a lower-paced life. It also has some disadvantages, notably the high cost of living and, what bothers most newcomers, the isolated location.

Hawaii is not an out of the way, never-never land—if it ever was. It does offer volcanoes, beautiful scenery, brown-skinned hula girls and a royal blue ocean.

But it also has American slang, brand names, rock'n'roli, baseball and a symphony orchestra.

And pride—as one Oriental businessman said on admission day, "We're all haoles now."

No Jail Term After Conviction On Manslaughter

DENVER (AP) — Mrs. Marie Elaine O'Rear was spared a jail sentence when she appeared in court Thursday on a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of her 7-week-old daughter. She said she will return to her home town, Nevada, Mo.

"I'm convinced that this girl did not intend to kill her baby," said Judge Dan D. Bowman.

Mrs. O'Rear pleaded guilty to a charge of involuntary manslaughter. Judge Bowman imposed a one-year jail term but said she would not have to serve it "during good behavior."

Mrs. O'Rear is 18. She and her husband, Darrell, came to Denver soon after his graduation from high school a year ago. The baby, Deirdre, died in February. An autopsy attributed death to a brain hemorrhage. Mrs. O'Rear told investigators she slapped the baby because it cried.

Israel's Silent Revolution

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP) — Restless Bedouin tribes who have roamed the Holy Land for centuries may soon fold up their tents and move into modern bungalows — if all goes well with Israel's "silent revolution."

Under a sweeping resettlement plan, Israeli authorities hope to convert the country's 30,000 Arab nomads into productive citizens, but the scheme may take 20 years or more.

When Israel emerged as a nation of 8,000 square miles 15 years ago, nearly 900,000 Arabs fled the territory to become refugees in surrounding Arab states.

About 240,000 Arabs remained behind, and most of them settled in Israeli towns and villages, absorbed partially at least into the life of the new state.

Only the Bedouins remained — some two dozen Moslem tribes headed by sheikhs who serve as leader, judge and registrar of births and deaths.

Over the ages the life of the Bedouin has changed little. He still pitches his tent with the opening toward the east and pastures his sheep and goats on the scanty growths of the desert.

The silent revolution, as the resettlement plan is popularly called, is aimed not only at improving the Bedouins' lot but at eliminating a situation that has given Israeli security officials some sleepless nights.

With pastures for their flocks dwindling under Israel's expanding agricultural program, Bedouins have had to seek some other form of livelihood.

Some nomads have learned a trade, but others have turned to more dubious callings.

Security officials have found that, if a Bedouin cannot wrest a living from the desert as his ancestors did, he sometimes turns to smuggling and occasionally spies for neighboring Arab states.

Panama City Beach Closed to Swimmers After Four Drown

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)—The fourth drowning victim in as many days has caused officials of West Panama City beach to close the surfs to swimmers until the waters calm.

The furious Gulf of Mexico currents Thursday caused the drowning of Ralph Coleman, 40, of Memphis, Tenn.

Officials said Coleman was on a rubber raft with his daughter when undercurrents pulled them into deep water. The daughter made it to shore, but Coleman could not swim.

Lifeguards said they have rescued nearly 150 persons since Monday.

Military Experts Skeptical

The 'War' In Laos Can Hardly Be Called War

By ANTOINE YARED

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — At night they drive their jeeps and trucks with the lights on. They leave the lights on in their tents.

They are the neutralist and pro-Communist Pathet Lao armies facing each other and fighting a "war" in the Plaine des Jarres area of Laos, 110 miles north of here.

Everybody knows where everybody else is.

Western military observers, who visited the barren, little plateau, said the reason for this nonchalance in a battle zone probably is that neither side wants to do much damage to the other.

Observers say hostilities do not constitute war as viewed by Western military strategists. Its only resemblance to war is that the soldiers are digging trenches and throwing shells at each other from time to time.

Since fighting erupted March 31, unofficial figures put casualties on the neutralist side at more than 200 killed and several hundred wounded. The Pathet Lao never divulge their losses and they are difficult to estimate.

Communiques issued by both sides frequently use the military terms artillery barrage, violent combat and hand-to-hand fighting.

But Western military observers say the worst artillery barrage lasted three consecutive hours. When a maximum of 300 shells are fired, this is considered heavy bombardment.

The observers say the salvos seldom hit anything because neither side has artillery control. Most shells usually fall on surrounding barren hills. The observers, however, say that the Pathet Lao have better gunners because they have the Communist North Vietnamese on their side. The impression is that the Pathet Lao do not want to press too hard on the neutralist forces of Gen. Kong Le—at least for the moment.

The observers say the neutralist troops, who number about 3,000, are not always in position to silence the Pathet Lao guns because they either are not accurate enough or do not have long-range artillery to reach the Pathet Lao guns.

The Pathet Lao, with a force of about 5,000 have a variety of Russian-made guns which are superior to Kong Le's, which include 85mm and 76mm and 82 recoilless weapons.

Kong Le has some 85mm Russian-made guns but lacks enough ammunition. He also has 105mm American-made howitzers.

So far, the territory lost by Kong Le is no more than 30 square miles. But this is considered to be a great gain for the Communists. The diplomats say the Communist policy is to nibble until they eventually control all of Laos.

However, the diplomats say the Pathet Lao seems to be frightened of the consequences if they abruptly take all of the Plaine.

Tuesday Weld Told Her Car An Asset

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A judge says that 19-year-old actress Tuesday Weld may be too young to have an automobile in her name, but if she owns one she has to claim it as an asset.

Superior Judge Clyde C. Triplett ruled Thursday that the $5,000 vehicle must be included in a list of the actress' assets by her guardian, her mother, Yosene Weld.

Mrs. Weld—in a routine accounting—said her daughter had assets of $42,661, mostly in stocks and bonds and excluding the automobile. Most of the young actress' assets were inherited from her paternal grandmother, Sarah Weld of Boston, the document said.

B'Way Classes Meet

The Live Wires and Loyal Workers Class of the East Broadway Christian Church met in the church basement Saturday, June 15, at 7 p.m. for the monthly meeting which opened with devotional and prayer by Mrs. Lawrence Roe.

The business meeting was presided over by the class president, Jack McMurdo, and a number of things were discussed. The painting of the basement was to start June 17. Signs telling the location of the church and other information are in the process of being made and are to be placed on highway entrances to Sedalia.

Cake and ice cream were served during the social hour.

The benediction was given by Bill Sedgewick.

The next meeting will be at Liberty Park and watermelon will be served. The meetings are held the third Saturday evening of each month.

THE SEDALIA DEMOCRAT

Sedalia, Missouri, Sunday, June 23, 1963 | In Combination With The Morning Capital | Feature Section

SOROSIS MEMBERS are shown in a collection of wedding gowns of early Sedalia families which are in the care of Mrs. T. H. Yount, 1809 West Third, who hopes some day Pettis County will have a museum where they may be displayed. Left to right are Mrs. Keith Yount, wearing a wedding dress of 1891; Mrs. Robert Johnson, Sorosis president; in a wedding gown of 1883; Mrs. William K. Gibson, in a dress of 1885; Mrs. John Lamy, wearing her mother's dress of 1917 and Mrs. H. W. Harris, in a wedding gown of 1880. (Democrat-Capital photos)

Array of Early Wedding Dresses Shows How Designs Have Changed

By Hazel Lang

ORIGINALLY bridesmaids had important duties to perform, the senior of them personally attended the bride for some days before the wedding. She made the bridal wreath, the table decorations for the bridal feast, and dressed the bride.

The latter duty, those who were trying to get some of the Sorosis members into wedding gowns of past generations for pictures, found, probably took several days, because it was a major operation. It must have been a problem that took plenty of patience and time for the bride and her senior bridesmaid to figure out how to get into them, and that might have been why more bridesmaids were added to the wedding. That was certainly what we needed that very hot day at Heard Memorial Club House — more bridesmaids with ingenious ability to know instinctively how these creations went on and where the eyes were for the hooks.

Even the most modern of the collection of gowns, which was 1917, and certainly at least the beginning of the era of more simple fashions, offered complications. It was worn by Mrs. John Lamy, and was the wedding dress of her mother, Mrs. Charles Messerly, Jr., 705 West Broadway.

The wedding of the Messerlys as appeared in The Sedalia Democrat at the time began:

"No more resplendant ceremony has been witnessed in society circles for years than the rainbow wedding of Miss Gwendolyn Johns, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Minton Johns, which was solemnized at the Broadway Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. R. C. Williamson.

The description of the bride's dress in the article stated:

"The bride was exceedingly pretty in the robe of ivory satin embroidered in silver, the bodice of rose point lace. Her long court train, which fell from the shoulders, was embroidered in silver edged with lilies of the valley. Her veil of tule was made with cape effect of rose point lace and was held in place by lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies."

And now we know why we couldn't figure out how that long train with a row of hooks across the top attached to the dress. We couldn't find the eyes and the reason we couldn't was that we were looking for them at the waist line and the article states the train fell from the shoulders. We didn't look up on the shoulders, we finally resorted to safety pins and pinned it to the waistline.

Mrs. Lamy, who was Mary Alice Messerly, not only wore her mother's wedding dress, but modeled by other young women for the pictures were the wedding gowns of her two grandmothers, her mother's mother, Mrs. William Minton Johns, and her father's mother, Mrs. Charles Messerly, Sr.

Mrs. Keith Yount is pictured in the wedding gown of Miss Alice Newkirk, who was married in 1891 to William Minton Johns.

The Sedalia Morning Gazette carried the article of this wedding which follows in part:

"The Broadway Presbyterian Church was crowded last evening at 8:30 o'clock by the elite society of the city to witness the ceremonies which made Miss Alice Newkirk and W. Mint Johns man and wife. Miss Alice is the youngest daughter of Hon. Cyrus Newkirk, president of the First National Bank, and Mr. Johns is the junior member of the lumber firm of S. P. Johns and Son.

"The bride's dress was an elegant princess dress of pure white brocaded satin and armure silk with train. The corsage (and that means a bodice and not a bouquet of flowers) is V shaped with high puffed sleeves trimmed in rose point lace, with suede gloves and slippers to match, rose net veil caught with pearl pins, and her hand carried a bouquet of brides roses."

The Rev. J. R. Stephenson performed the ceremony and Prof. A. G. Robyn, organist at the Grand Avenue Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, who was a noted musician, presided at the organ.

The church was decorated with wisteria and cape jasmine.

A reception followed at the Newkirk mansion which was on the southeast corner of Broadway and Ohio. About 200 were present and each guest received a box of wedding cake.

The wedding took place on June 4, 1891 and 50 years later, on June 4, 1941, she wore her wedding dress again at her golden wedding, at the reception given at the Sedalia Country Club in their honor by their son, Cyrus Johns, who is president of the American Steel Corporation. She carried a little old fashioned colonial bouquet of jasmine.

Beneath the full skirt of this very heavy satin which has turned deep ivory, was something else that looked like a petticoat and yet seemed attached to the dress. Mrs. Yount wasn't exactly certain what it was and neither was anybody else. Both the dress and this petticoat affair that was on a waist band, had yards and yards of material and left everybody in a confused state. The question was, how to get into it, but after a struggle, she did. She may not have been in it right, but she was in it.

The gown was designed with boned bodice, that fastened up the front, leg of mutton sleeves, with winged effect satin ruffles over the shoulders, and the train which was attached to the waist in the back was brocaded with thistle pattern, widened into a rounded flare at the end beneath which were two wide rows of silk lace.

Mrs. Robert S. Johnson modeled the wedding dress of Mrs. Charles Messerly, Sr., who was Miss Mary McRobert of Springfield, Ill., and was married in 1884 to Mr. Messerly, in Springfield.

The Springfield, Ill., paper carried an account of the wedding which follows in part:

"Yesterday afternoon at the residence of the mother of the bride, Rev. Albert Hale, in the presence of a large number of friends, pronounced the ceremony which made Charles E. Messerly and Miss Mary N. McRoberts husband and wife.

"The bride and groom had no attendants thus making the pleasant deviation from the regular regime. The spacious parlors were shaded and lit by gas-light making the occasion a more solemn one. There were 100 guests present."

The wedding gown is an elaborate creation imported from France and completely handmade of French valenciennes lace and organdy fashioned with a full train. The collar has a wide ruffle, lace trimmed and the sleeves of three quarter length, have lace ruffles. Inserts of lace and designs are down the front of the fitted waist and the full skirt, as well as the train, which is lace edged.

At the time Mr. Messerly was mayor of Sedalia and a big reception and banquet was given on Thursday, Feb. 7, 1884.

From the Sedalia paper was the following about the reception:

"Last evening an epoch in society events that will live green in memory of Sedalians, and bloom radiant at each succeeding event that may come after. The occasion was the reception and banquet tendered to Mayor C. E. Messerly and his lovely bride, nee Miss Mary McRobert of Springfield, Ill.

"Preparations for the event have been in making by the citizens for some days and society circles have been aglow with anticipation. Sicher's Park big frame building had been selected as the place and every arrangement perfected that would crown the event as it did with success.

"The cream of Sedalia society attended.

"The ladies, the loveliest in the land with their rich costumes, brilliant ornaments their smiles and merry prattle for a constellation that was bewildering in pleasure."

The Sicher's Park is now Liberty Park and the big frame building stood where Convention Hall now stands.

Mrs. William Gibson wears the beautiful gown of Mrs. W. H. Powell, who was married to Mr. Powell in 1885. Styled with the high neck of lace so popular at that time, this dress, too, is of organdy and handmade lace, with hand crocheted medalions down the front. The dress buttons in the back with tiny buttons, has long tight sleeves and a short train. We fastened only the top hook of the high neck to save time and effort, then the picture taking man decided to take a back view.

The exquisite gown of white satin modeled by Mrs. H. W. Harris, was the wedding dress of two brides. It was on Aug. 24, 1880, that Miss Ella Lamy of Sedalia, was married to Charles P. Brown, of St. Louis. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lamy, Sr., and they were married by the Rev. J. B. Fuller in the First Baptist Church which stood at the corner of Fourth and Lamine. A large reception was given by the bridegroom at Sicher Park, with people attending from St. Louis, and many other places.

On Oct. 6, 1909, her daughter, Miss Lucile Brown, wore the dress at the home wedding, 1003 South Ohio, when she was married to Joseph Waddell, with Rev. Stanislaus Neiberg performing the ceremony.

The wedding gown of white satin was made with long basque with three quarter length sleeves and ruffles of French Valenciennes lace edged the low neckline and the pleated cuffs of the sleeves. The very full skirt lengthened into a train and was trimmed with three rows of the lace and edged with finely pleated satin. The basque was fastened with a crocheted cord of fine thread that laced in small embroidered eyelets down the front. Mrs. Waddell lives at 806 West Broadway.

And then there was what was called the second day dress, which was worn the second day after the ceremony, when neighbors were invited in, or when the bride called on the bridegroom's family.

The very lovely second day dress worn by Mrs. H. W. Harris, belonged to Miss Susan Middleswart, who was married on March

Wally Boag Turns In Long Record

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)—Wally Boag was signed on a two-week deal. Eight years and 13,000 performances later, he is still starring in the Golden Horseshoe Revue at Disneyland.

There must be some kind of a record there. Five times a day, Wally comes on the stage of the Frontier Playhouse and convulses the crowd of Californians and tourists.

"You're going to read about me in the newspapers," he says grandly, adding: "I smoke in bed."

The audience roars. He looks like a campus cutup, which is a neat trick for a man in his 40s. He wears a bogus Western costume with six-shooters, which he fires occasionally to make sure everyone is paying attention.

He blows up balloons and fashions them into animal shapes, maintaining a fast patter throughout. He does a loose-jointed dance, plays the bagpipes and shoots water pistols.

To prove he will do anything, he doffs his toupee and replaces it backwards. Greater love for a laugh hath no actor.

The remarkable thing about his performance is not only that it is funny to hick and sophisticate alike. It is amazing that he can make each show seem as if he were auditioning.

How does he maintain his enthusiasm?

"The audiences," he replied. "They are great. Once in a while you get a cold audience; then it's a challenge to work harder and make them laugh.

"It's strange with some of the teen-agers. They have never seen live entertainment; all they know is television. They just sit there openmouthed, not knowing what to do. But the oldtimers — the ones who are 60 and over—knew what vaudeville was. They love the show."

Wally Boag has known every kind of audience from the time he was 19 and left Portland, Ore., to seek his fortune in show business. Vaudeville had just about expired, but he managed to get his seasoning in its dying days, doing his act with big-band units that toured theaters.

In 1955 he ran into tenor Donald Novis, with whom he had appeared in Australia. Novis mentioned he was planning to work for his friend Walt Disney at the new Disneyland Park and suggested Wally try out for it. Wally did, performing his act on a cold stage at the studio. Walt laughed, and that was enough.

Said Boag: "I have to laugh when my old buddies feel sorry for me because I'm still playing at Disneyland. Brother, they can have the night club drunks, the empty houses at matinees, the worry about bookings, the cheap hotels, the constant travel.

THE SECOND DAY DRESS for the bride was very important back in 1868 when it was worn by Mrs. Reuben A. Blair, mother of Miss Jessie Blair, for it was then, on the day after the wedding, that there was a gathering of relatives. This dress, with bonnet and parsal, was modeled by Mrs. H. W. Harris, 1515 West Fourth.

THE WEDDING GOWN of Mrs. C. E. Messerly, Jr., 705 West Broadway, is worn by her daughter, Mrs. John Lamy, 509 West Broadway. This dress is of white satin elaborately embroidered in gold.

MRS. H. W. HARRIS models the wedding gown of two brides, Mrs. Joseph Waddell, 806 West Broadway, who was married in 1909, and her mother, Mrs. Charles P. Brown, for whom it was made in 1880. It is of satin with lace trim.

Mrs. Poogue was graduated from Windsor High School in 1909 as salutatorian of her class. She taught in the Henry County Schools for four years prior to her marriage. Mr. Poogue attended Park College, Parkville, Sedalia Business College, and later engaged in farming near Lincoln, where he and Mrs. Poogue established their first home.

They are the parents of two children: Mrs. Herschell F. Hansen, of near Lincoln, and Wendell Poogue, Kansas City. They have six grandchildren, Mrs. Thomas W. Spensley, Jr. (Janice Hansen), Dubuque, Ia.; Darryl and Dwayne Hansen, of near Lincoln; Lynne, Monte and Kevin Poogue, Kansas City.

Attending the open house who were present at the wedding 50 years ago were: Mr. Poogue's sisters, Mrs. Dalton Davis (Bernice), Lowland, Colo. Mrs. Frank Perry (Eulabelle), and Mr. Perry, Columbia; Mrs. Poogue's nephew, Jensen Smith, Windsor; and Mr. Poogue's brother, J. R. Poogue, Lincoln.

Assisting the couple in receiving guests were their son, Wendell Poague, and their son-in-law, Herschell Hansen. Mrs. Dewey Larson acted as hostess.

Baskets of yellow and white gladioli, yellow chrysanthemums and pompon chrysanthemums and white hydrangea were arranged throughout the room with potted plants of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums centering the gift tables. Covering the tables were lace cloths. An arrangement of Peact roses were placed on the piano.

The serving table was covered with a coffee beige taffeta cloth, overlaid with matching net, edged with a wide net ruffle, threaded with gold, and covered with gold leaves and matching bows. An arrangement of bronze chrysanthemums and greenery and gold tapers formed the centerpiece. Mrs. Herschell Hansen presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Wendell Poogue served coffee.

A four tiered wedding cake was adorned with white and gold bells, white roses and gold leaves. Mrs. Thomas W. Spensley, Jr., assisted by Mrs. John Poogue, Bellvue, Wash., a niece of the couple, served cake.

Presiding at the guest book was Miss Lynne Poogue, granddaughter, and Monte Poogue received the gifts. Assisting with the gifts were Mrs. J. S. Thomas, Lincoln, and Mrs. Robert Poogue, a niece, Wichita, Kan. All servers had corsages of yellow carnations.

A wall arrangement reviewed the life of the couple in pictures. Anniversary cards were displayed.

Honoring the couple were two songs, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and "Put on Your Old Grey Bonnett," sung by Herschell Hansen and Miss Hazel Corley, accompanied by Mrs. Hansen.

For the occasion, Mrs. Poogue chose a light navy and white summer knit suit and wore a corsage of yellow rosebuds.

Approximately 175 guests attended.

David Beacon Can't Drive Until He's 91

KENILWORTH, England (AP)—David Deacon is dejected — he can't drive his automobile until he's 91.

An enthusiastic motorist, 81-yearold Deacon was fined 14 pounds ($39.20) last week and disqualified from driving for the next 10 years.

"We welcome the decision" said Deacon's son, Kenneth, speaking for members of the family. His car has now been locked away in a garage some distance from the house and will soon be sold.

"I'm going around to all the local garages and tell them they must not sell my father another car."

Earlier, the magistrates banned Deacon from driving a car. But, obsessed by automobiles, he got around the ban.

Every morning he would drive his car up and down his 150-yard-long driveway—just for the fun of it.

One day last week he noticed his gas was running low and, being down near the front gate, he took a forbidden tour to the gas station.

Police said that on his way to the pump he:

Zig-zagged down the road.

Frightened five pedestrians and two other drivers.

Terrified a little girl who was riding a bicycle.

He was accused of driving while disqualified and dangerous driving.

Karen Marcum Given In Marriage To Mr. Charles William Stock

South Presbyterian Church in Kansas City was the scene of the marriage of Miss Karen Elizabeth Marcum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Marcum, Kansas City, to Mr. Charles William Stock, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Stock, California. The vows were heard by the Rev. Joseph B. Ledford at eight o'clock the evening of June 8 in the sanctuary, which was decked with white stock and greenery.

Mrs. Jerold Scofield played wedding selections and accompanied Mr. Maurice Walker, who sang "I Love Thee" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white Swiss organdy and Alencon lace over satin designed with a decollete' neckline edged with lace motifs, short sleeves and a basque bodice complemented by a bouffant skirt of floor length which extended into a court train. Her illusion veil was held by a headpiece of white organza roses. She carried a Bible and a cascade of white Cymbidium orchids and ivy. In her hand she also carried a heirloom handkerchief, which had been carried by Mrs. Stock and Mrs. Stock's mother at their weddings.

Miss Judith Boyce was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Judy Anne Brett and Miss Judith Erin Johnson. Attendants wore silk organza dresses of azaela. The snug bodices featured boat necklines and brief sleeves. The bell shaped skirts were accented with Empire waists, designer bows and draped affects in the front. Their headpieces were of matching designer bows. They carried wild rose glamellias and violet showers.

Mr. Zane V. Akins, Dunnegan, was best man. Groomsmen were Mr. James D. Alexander, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Mr. James Turrentine, brother-in-law of the bride. Guests were escorted to their seats by Mr. Paul Jungmeyer, Jamestown, and Mr. Robert I. Sears.

Miss Kathie Lynn, Turrentine, niece of the bride was flower girl and wore a dress of white organdy over pale pink. She carried a miniature bouquet made like that of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a pale pink dress accessorized with pink and a green orchid corsage. Mrs. Stock wore a dress and hat of matching beige with crystal beads and a bronze orchid corsage.

A reception for the couple was held at the church following the ceremony. Mrs. James D. Alexander, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Billie Kay Farrar, West Plains, and Miss Courtney Roberts, Liberty, served.

Mrs. Robert Sears and Mrs. Charles Roberts were in charge of gifts.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a navy dress with white crepe jacket and accessories to harmonize.

The couple will be at home at Butl's duplex, California.

The bridegroom is manager and co-owner of a feed business in California.

School Bill Blocking Legislature

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A bill to legalize the school foundation program is the biggest road block in the path of the Missouri Legislature as it heads into its final week.

Willy nilly, whether all work is done or not, the lawmakers must quit work on bills by midnight Sunday, June 30.

Leaders on both sides still are aiming at adjournment by Saturday night, June 29. They reaffirmed this decision at a conference this week. Whether they make it or not may depend on the school bill.

Here's the situation:

Gov. John M. Dalton recommended that the foundation plan of state aid to public schools be fully financed for the next two years at $229 million. That includes $9 million increase to take care of natural growth in enrollments.

In passing the appropriation bills, the House raised that by $3 million, making the increase over the present biennium $12 million. The Senate has cut the figure back to the governor's recommendation.

The House also passed a bill to liberalize the state aid formula by almost $34 million a biennium and this is the big problem in the closing days of the session.

The Senate Education Committee has cut the formula in such a way that the biennial increase in cost would amount to about $13.5 million, or an estimated $10.1 million for its first two years.

And there is opposition in the Senate even to that much increase on grounds it would give a disproportionate share of the sales tax increase to public schools at the expense of higher education, mental health, medical care for the aged, institutional needs and so on.

The bill probably cannot be reached for debate until late in the final week, so it is 65 bills down on the Senate docket of House bills awaiting action. And the appropriation bills must be taken care of first.

House and Senate conferees on the money bills say they are not in disagreement about them but they do not know how much to allow for still pending legislation —including the school foundation bill.

Measures to set up three intensive mental treatment centers and an expanded medical care program for the aged are pending in the House but are not expected to have much trouble.

There have been hints, however, that a power struggle might develop between the two houses over the mental treatment centers and the school foundation bill.

House members who serve two-year terms are more susceptible to school teacher pressure than the senators, who serve for four years, and the representatives passed the foundation program bill with enthusiasm.

A Packed Crowd Exp ected

Kennedy's Ireland Visit Is Eagerly Awaited

By HUGH MULLIGAN

NEW ROSS, Ireland (AP) — They'll line the roads for miles around to greet the Yankee boy when President John Fitzgerald Kennedy makes a sentimental journey to the home of his ancestors here next week.

By train and bus, car and bicycle, jaunting car and shanks mare, they'll come to welcome the man whom the Cork weekly Examiner has called the greatest public figure to visit Ireland since St. Patrick.

A crowd of upwards of 50,000 is expected down on the quayside at New Ross harbor, where great-grandfather Patrick Kennedy boarded a ship 120 years ago to seek his fortune in the bright new lands beyond the sea.

Don't ask where a town of less than 5,000 gets 50,000 people from, but they're coming from as far away as Donegal in the north and the wild Kerry coast in the west. Chalk it up to Irish gregariousness, their love of a really big blast and the incredible popularity of President Kennedy in the Auld Sod.

A country which dances a jig every time a retired New York cop comes back for a look around can be pardoned for blowing its cobeen at the prospect of one of its far flung emigrant sons coming back as President of the United States.

Arriving on Wednesday, Kennedy will be in Ireland until noon Saturday.

He will visit Dublin, New Ross, Wexford, Cork, Galway and Shannon Airport, before winging off to meet Prime Minister Harold Macmillan in England.

But the sentimental heart of the celebration will be right here in this lovely little County Wexford town where there are more Kennedy cousins than you can shake a shillelah at and where the lighting of big bonfires will go on for many hours after his helicopter has disappeared over the purple bogs.

"I don't know how we'll ever get the people back to work," sighed Andy Minihan, chairman of the Urban Council, the local equivalent of mayor. A ramrod straight man with a big booming voice, Minihan wears a magnificent reddish beard but hasn't decided yet where he'll wear his official derby. It all depends on the President. "If he wears a hat, I'll get me derby out. If not, I won't. Protocol you know."

After the festivities on the quay, Kennedy will drive six winding miles down to Dunganstown, on the lush green banks of the Barrowk River, to visit the old family homestead and sip a cup of tea with Widow Ryan, a third cousin who farms the 35-acre plot.

"If it's up to me," said Mary Ryan, "I'll give him a good feed of real Irish bacon, a fine cut of ham, good homemade bread, fresh-churned butter and some strong Irish tea. 'T'would be better for him than the stuff the American Embassy will probably want catered in."

Mrs. Ryan is a handsome, erect, blue-eyed woman who wears her hair in a bun and loves the simple old-fashioned ways. In between looking after her three cows and 70 chickens and keeping the farm going, she still finds time to be gracious to the hundreds of tourists who come trooping out to see the old Kennedy cottage. Everyone for miles around says the big visit hasn't changed her a bit.

"What will I call him? Why it's a family affair, so I'll just call him Cousin Jack," said Mrs. Ryan with a laugh that lit up her ruddy face like the afternoon sun on the distant black stairs mountains.

"That's what I called him when he visited here in 1947."

Besides her two daughters, her brother's family and her sister's family, some 20 Kennedy cousins will crowd into Mrs. Ryan's little lace-curtained parlor to greet their distinguished relative and get in on the free vittles.

After his cup of tay, as the Irish call it, the President will walk across the barnyard to the little stone cottage that his great-grandfather occupied before striking out for America in the 1840's when the gaunt shadow of famine stretched across Ireland. The old homestead looks about the same as it did then, except the thatched roof has been replaced by corrugated tin.

Little did Patrick Kennedy dream, as he knocked barrels together in a loft in East Boston, that the old homestead which he never saw again would one day be connected to the White House by a hot line and that a helicopter would come down in one of his potato fields to scoop up the President of the United States.

Although the President will be in town less than an hour, all New Ross has been busy painting up, fixing up, putting out window boxes of fresh flowers, hanging out flags and bunting, even along streets that the parade won't go by.

"I could use a dozen more men, if I could get them," said James Stacey, the local paint contractor. "Twice last week I had to send to Dublin for more paint. I don't know what we'll do for work the next two years, so many places have been painted this past month."

Hollywood Wife Misses Husband

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Here's how one Hollywood wife feels about working here while her husband stars in a Broadway hit musical.

"I'm miserable," says Oscar-winner Shirley Jones. "I'm going to move to New York."

Jack Cassidy, Shirley's husband, is the hit of the New York musical "She Loves Me." Shirley is playing Marlon Brando's love interest in "King of the Mountain."

Many Hollywood marriages have broken up because of too much geography between husband and wife. Out here that adage about absence making the heart grow fonder usually doesn't work.

"It works for me and Jack," says the beautiful blonde. "He's as miserable as I am. He came out for Father's Day on his day off — and he went right back and rented a home in Long Island for me and the children.

"I would have been back there from the start, but Jack made me take this role. He felt I couldn't afford to turn down a Marlon Brando movie."

There have been other picture offers just as attactive.

"But I'm not making any decisions on them," she says. "I'll do what my husband wants."

Cassidy, a talented singer, met and married Shirley while they sang together in the London company of "Oklahoma." Since then her career has zoomed while his hasn't — until now.

"No one ever cast Jack right until this musical," says his proud wife. "He plays a comical villain. Hollywood always wanted him to play weak villains.

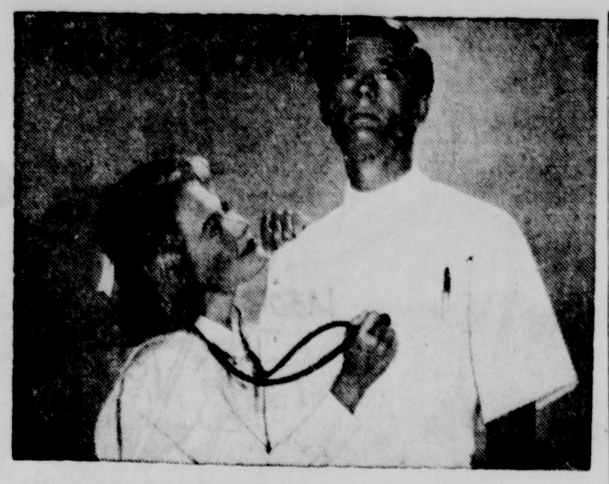
"At home, he is no villain. He's no weakling either. But he is comical."

New Hotel Planned For Country Club In Kansas City

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Plans for new high-rise luxury apartment buildings and a 300-room hotel on the Country Club Plaza were announced Thursday by the J. C. Nichols Co.

The $20 million project is contingent on rezoning the property, now the site of 13 duplex dwellings and two single-family houses. The 6½ acre site is at the southwest corner of Wornall Road and Ward Parkway.

Nichols said tentative plans include four or five apartment buildings up to 20 floors high and totaling up to 550 units.



"Breathe deeply and say Ah - love you!" says Tammy, the hilarious Miss from Mississippi. The doctor who appears worried about the state of his heart is Peter Fonda. Tammy is played by Sandra Dee. And the picture is "Tammy and the Doctor" . . . all about a very infectious kind of heart-trouble called boy-meets-girl. Now showing at Fox Theatre.

Hollywood's House Built By a Hound

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The house that a hound built now rises in modern splendor over the historic Cahuenga Pass, gateway to Hollywood.

Of course, Huckleberry Hound wasn't the only one who built the new home of Hanna-Barbera Productions. He got some help from the Flintstones, Yogi Bear, the Jetsons, Top Cat, Quick Draw McGraw, Touche Turtle, Wally Gator, Lippy Lion and Loopy De Loop.

Quite a crew of house builders. And the saga of Bill Hanna and Joe Barbera is quite a success story. Just six years ago they started in business with a writer, animator and cameraman.

Today, 250 people labor in the new Hanna-Barbera plant, the most modern cartoon factory in the world. So far the company has turned out 760 cartoon shorts for television and theaters. Coming up: "Whistle Your Way Back Home," an animated feature starring the stalward hound, Huck.

Hanna and Barbera, both 20-year veterans of "Tom and Jerry" at MGM, have had many surprises with their success. Not the least has been the boom of the merchandizing end of their enterrise.

"We never realized how much money there was to be found in character products," said Hanna in his luxurious new office (his and Barbera's are separate and equal). "When we were at MGM, we never did much about merchandize tie-ups. There were too many executives and lawyers to go through."

That aspect was not neglected when they went independent. Now their characters adorn products in 44 countries; that's how far the cartoons are circulated.

"In this country alone, we have 480 licensees who manufacture 2,000 different items," said Hanna. "They include pajamas, rattles, booties, ties, jewelry, comis books all kinds of toys, wading pools, lamps, bubble bath, etc.

"Seven million Huckleberry Hound shoes have been made in Japan. Rugs are made in Belgium There is a soda pop in Sweden called Flinta, after the Flintstones We sold a million of the Pebbles dolls at $5 a copy."

What does all this return to Hanna-Barbera?

"Our license fee is five per cent of the wholesale price," said Hanna. "We figure a gross of $50 million in merchandizing this year so that will mean a return of $2¼ million. And that is almost pure profit. Except for a little art work, we contribute nothing but the name.

"Merchandizing is already about 25 per cent of our gross profit."

St. Louis Group Seeks Approval For Flood Work

WASHINGTON (AP)—A delegation from St. Louis asked Congress Thursday to approve the $8 million President Kennedy budgeted for flood control work at St. Louis in the year which starts July 1.

John H. Poelker, city comptroller, told a subcommittee flood waters from the Missouri and Mississippi rivers still pose a great threat to St. Louis.

Array Of

10, 1868, to Reuben A. Blair. They were married at the farm home of her parents near the little village in Ohio, on the Ohio River, about half way between Cincinnati and Toledo.

The wedding day had been set for March 9, but the bridegroom and his best man just didn't get there in time. Living in Louisiana, they came up along the Mississippi and then the Ohio rivers, but they had to take a row boat to get to the village and they just didn't make it until the next day because of the ice in the river.

They were a little stiffer than most bridegrooms and best men, by the time they got to the wedding, stiff from cold, and the bride's mother always lamented "And I forgot to give him any hot coffee."

They were the parents of Miss Jessie Blair. She never recalls that her mother told about her wedding dress, but the second day dress, which she bought on a visit to a cousin in Kansas City at Bullene-Emery Birds, which was, of course, later Emery Birds. She kept this as long as she lived and Miss Blair has treasured it, too. It is of rose and green changeable plaid taffeta, with off the shoulder neckline, fitted waist with short sleeves and long full skirt.

With it she wore a litle black bonnet that tied under her chin. It is made with jet black beads with a flower in front. Her black ruffled parasol has a long ebony handle.

Reuben Blair took his bride back to Louisiana and they went clear on to New Orleans. During the trip the oil dripped, as they were eating, from a lamp and ruined one of her best dresses.

After the group picture had been taken the women went upstairs again at Heard Memorial Club House to change back to the comfortable clothes they had worn, but there were still more problems. Now they had to get themselves out of these complicated clothes, but this time they decided on organization. As one of them began unhooking the front of another ones dress, somebody else began unfastening the back of hers, and somebody else started unfastening hers and Sophia Johnston, who got hers off to the waist so she could breathe again, took her place back of the last one and began unbuttoning her dress. It was a real assembly line, but they got undressed in short order and were ready for that glass of cold lemonade waiting for them.

The wedding dresses have been given to Mrs. T. H. Yount for the collection of the lovely old dresses and undies, with many flounces and much lace, that she hopes to display some day in Pettis County museum. That has been her dream, and she is keeping them stored until that time, for surely, she believes, Sedalians will one day awake to the value of a museum where things that have been given the Pettis County Historical Society and the collection of dresses can be adequately and artistically exhibited. Perhaps, even, manikins may be fitted out in the dresses and placed in glass cases. It will take money and cooperation, but it would be something really worth while, and something every citizen should want to have a part in.

Mrs. Yount has been collecting these rare garments for several years and she was amused one day when someone left her the remains of a rummage sale that did not sell, with a message that they heard she was collecting old clothes.

She is, indeed, collecting old clothes, but not the kind that go to a rummage sale; she wants the pretty garments of past generations, and she wants, very much, a museum to put them in, for after all, this shouldn't be a one woman project. Everybody should enter into it as they did into the spirit of the Centennial—this is the glance backward into other eras of life in the county, something that will tell in part, its story of its past.

Parking and Planning...

Under consideration in the downtown shopping district is another off-street parking facility for 71 automobiles at Second street and Ohio avenue. The proposal for it was made at city council meeting. The tentative price is $90,500 involving the purchase and razing of three buildings. Council has taken this matter under advisement for careful study.

If financing and other wrinkles can be ironed out to establish a parking lot in this location it would be most convenient to shoppers. It would be the 14th off-street parking facility in Sedalia's business district.

Our community is far ahead of many of equal or larger size in this respect and conforms to the suggestion made seven years ago by Hare and Hare, city planners, that off-street parking in Sedalia at that time was a pressing need. This was only one of many facets to a comprehensive or master city plan for the city of Sedalia prepared by professional planners to assist in carrying out logical development of Sedalia.

Regretfully, during the intervening years, the city plan in many respects has been so neglected that it might virtually be considered an orphan.

In the meantime, by the very nature of changing conditions, the City Plan needs to be brought up to date. Likewise, more impetus should be given at City Hall to accomplish the objectives outlined.

The contents of this brochure still are basically sound and are required reading for every councilman. They are guides that should be followed more meticulously by new faces at City Hall.

Some persons may reason that in regard to city planning we have gone far enough with off-street parking lots. We disagree with this if choice locations can be obtained at reasonable prices, a prime factor requiring careful study in relation to need and relative values.

Admittedly, another parking lot and those already established are not the answer to prevent the downtown business district from "drying up" —an expression which has a dreadful connotation to many merchants. Yet even a feeble step forward is more to be desired than the reluctance of individual property owners and their store room renters to get up steam and do something about restraining the downtown shopping district from become arid for lack of personal attention.

Next, after singing the blues too long, may come the desert song. Downtown Sedalians don't want to hear it.

FINDING THE WAY

Anticipation's Alternative

BY RALPH W. LOEW D. D
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Not too long ago I stood at the rim of an observation platform in Japan and looked at Hiroshima. I was conscious that I could say "18 years after Hiroshima. . . ." Most of us are better at hindsight than at foresight.

After a strike, it is possible for both sides to reason out their differences.

After the catastrophe it is possible to discover the structural defect or mistake in design that caused the tragedy.

After the accident it is possible to talk of the lack of judgment and the selfishness of speed that caused the broken bodies.

What is especially apparent in all of this is that we have been able to talk and do something about it afterwards. What if that dimension is taken away from us?

Suppose Norman Cousins is right when he says, "Man is now left with no defense except the use of his intelligence in keeping the horror (nuclear warfare) from happening. And the dominant characteristic of the present crisis is that the next emergency will leave no time for response. We either anticipate or die."

Every new report of nuclear experiment underscores the words.

Perhaps the greatest deterrent to such kind of anticipation is that we become so busy with the things of the moment that we forget the things that matter most.

Like the civilization that is more interested in its comforts and its gadgets and its pleasurable escapes than in the willingness to support moral judgments and community responsibility in seeking a way to protect our future.

There is nothing new in this. All history is filled with the laments of those who looked at the destruction of their best hopes. It is also filled with those who redeemed the holocaust into the support of men's best hopes. The only thing new about our situation is that there might not be an "after," and we now have a "before."

So Jesus looked over the city of Jerusalem and wept, saying, "If thou hadst known even in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! But now they are hid from thine eyes."

The present gives us the opportunity to learn the lessons of the past; our present gives us the responsibility to determine that there may yet be a time when our children's children can also look at history.

For it seems literally true that "we either anticipate or we die."

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

F. E. Laird, Omaha, Neb., has purchased the Royal Hotel, 113 East Third street, from J. O. Bailey, and has taken possession. He will have the hotel redecorated and improved in many ways.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Clinton is to have a new $60,000 Masonic Temple within a year which will house all the Masonic bodies, making it a Masonic community center with a secretary at all times in charge. They have a well-located lot just south of the post office building and $12,000 to start the building fund with.

For Senior Citizens

Senior citizens seeking a new place in the sun may be interested in the fact that among 4,000 posts available in the Peace Corps in 45 countries are hundreds which might well be filled by qualified persons who have recently retired or are contemplating retirement.

These openings are being created by Peace Corpsmen who are completing their two-year tours of duty and by requests for expansion of projects, or for new programs. The posts must be filled by Sept. 1.

Says Sargent Shriver, Peace Corps director: "We want as many senior volunteers as we can get for overseas assignment because of the expertness, patience and wisdom only experience and time can give."

Basic requirements: a bona fide skill in some trade or profession, ability to pass a satisfactory physical examination and successful completion of an orientation period.

The modest compensation and expenses do not conflict with pension, Social Security or dual compensation laws, the Peace Corps says.

Post offices have Peace Corps questionnaires available. Since it takes time to process applications, now is the time, during "Senior Citizens Month," to look into the matter.

WASHINGTON POST: The TV Wrestlers.— Television wrestling is, for all its synthetic sadisms, probably the safest of all professional sports. Ballplayers, as you know, are sometimes felled by line drives or put out of action with broken fingers. Matadors are sometimes painfully gored. Golfers must take the risk of ivy poisoning in the rough, of flea bites in the sandtraps and of bee stings on the putting greens. But if anybody has ever been seriously injured in a televised wrestling bout, it has escaped our notice; indeed we never cease to be astonished by the frantic eagerness of the participants to renew the combat even after the decision has been announced.

Wrestling is also the most egalitarian of sports. In other forms of athletic endeavor the race is usually to the swift, the battle to the strong and favor to men of skill. But wrestling championships appeared to be awarded on the basis of popularity, and since crowds are notoriously fickle with their favorites the title is constantly passing from one performer to another, so that in the end, probably, everybody gets a fair turn at being champion. This, we take it, is in the true democratic tradition.

Dialogue from Washington

By Vera Clay

Luther Hodges, our Secretary of Commerce, a soft-spoken North Carolinian and the oldest member of Kennedy's cabinet, says $4 million is "peanuts" compared to billions. He said it before the House Appropriations Committee and gave the Chairman, Congressman John J. Rooney of New York, a fit.

The $3.5 million item, to be exact, is what Hodges wants for the U. S. Travel Service, exactly a million more than its present budget and the solons want to know "what for", having been regaled with tales about cufflinks and bracelets being freely dispensed, carpets being laid and insignia being designed to identify our travel lads.

Hodges, a proven money maker and one time Governor of North Carolina, (the state which leads the Southern pack in industrial development) knows of what he speaks when he says "peanuts." If it takes largess to build up goodwill, he regards it as good business. As for laying carpets, it might have been wiser to bring an old American Indian rug to the travel office.

But, the whole idea of the U.S. Travel Service is to bring dollars back home. Instead of our gallivanting about the globe, spending, we are trying for a change, to get the world's tourists to see the USA and spend here.

The concept is different and even though the program has been in operation for more than a year, it is news to most of us who are so accustomed to hearing about money going in the other direction.

Uncle Sam plans to open his doors this summer so be prepared for what President Kennedy, Secretary Hodges and those who keep our national pocketbook, hope will be a banner year for the visitors and our own cash registers. Two dozen foreign tourists a day in a community compares to a new industry with an annual payroll of $150,000.

Expect 700,000 visitors. Last year, more than 604,000 came and spent $284 million, about $470 each. This does not count the Mexicans or Canadians who have been coming across the border for generations without any prodding from a tourist service.

Nevertheless, travel still is the largest single commodity in the balance of payment deficit. Hodges can say "peanuts" again and again and again as U. S. citizens spent $1.4 billion more abroad than any visitors did over here.

Every time you "fill'er up" or go for a coffee break, dwell on the balance of payment deficit: petroleum and coffee follow hard on travel in keeping the money flow out.

How do we break the habit of the "grande tour" (an international travel market of $3.5 million from 21 countries) and get the tourists to come from abroad to Yellowstone Park instead of the Alps — to San Francisco instead of Gay Paree — to New Orleans instead of Naples?

We tell them about the USA. We open travel offices in nine major cities. We proselytize and advertise. We do away with long, inquisitorial questionnaires and grant visas in a hurry. We make the guests welcome in every hamlet and port of entry (A big, super-giant welcome message from President Kennedy hangs in splendor at airports, prompting some to ask if the President is running a political campaign afield) and we remain our charming, hospitable selves.

If you don't know now, you will: posters will appear on 40,000 post office trucks, "Company's Coming" and Bob Hope, Danny Kaye and Helen Hayes will give you a TV "talking to." Look for visitors on your streets, too. Give them a helping hand, directions, a handshake and invite them in to see how you live. This, according to surveys, is their major request—to compare their misconceptions with the actuality.

The visitors love "our friendly ways." They think our food is marvelous, our cooking lousy. They don't like the dirt and crowds or tipping. They want translators and central information offices.

Within one half an hour after a foreign visitor checks into a Baltimore, Maryland hotel, an interpreter is on the phone, bidding him welcome. Major host cities (Philadelphia, Springfield, Kalamazoo and Los Angeles) have extensive "open house" programs—do it yourself "how do you do" operations — in readiness.

Most of our guests will come from England, West Germany and France. They will want to see showplace cities: New York City, Washington, Miami, San Francisco and Chicago. They will drive exuberantly and probably on the wrong side of the road down major superhighways, check in at our national parks (Yosemite, the Rockies) and try to get to the baby states, Alaska and Hawaii. They'll ask for shoofly pie, corn on the cob, reindeer steak, laulau and up-side-down cake (they have gotten a U. S. Travel food pamphlet). Some will take the industrial tours of plants and factories. They will complain about their feet, gape at our landmarks, praise our air-conditioning and supermarkets and deplore our manners. Let us, anyhow, bid them welcome. We always have been our own best advertisement — once they get to know us.

Newspapers

Yes, the radio is wonderful
To bring on the spot news,
And the television's mighty fine
To show the one spot views,
But when someone inferred to me
Newspapers they'd replace
I up and argued with 'em
That could never be the case,
'Cause a television story
Is there and then its gone—
And to a radio version,
How can anyone hold on,
But a newspaper story
You can clip and put away
And get it out and read it
At any future day,
You can cut out the wedding writeup
And the picture of the bride,
Clip that prized "future subscriber"
Or about someone who died;
About the boy in service,
Honors someone might receive,
The items when folks come to town
Or items when they leave,
You can say there's nothing in it,
Or can read it and enjoy it,
You can stack 'em in your attic
Or each day you can destroy it,
But there's often times some tension
When someone throws one away,
Maybe with the Big League scores,
Or about the PTA,
But we all sometimes clip, something
That to us means quite a bit,
It might be Sue's recital
Or the home run Johnny hit,
There is nothing like the paper
To describe some big event,
Or that tells all in detail
How our money will be spent,
And when it comes to meetings
Every size and every kind
There is nothing like the paper
All the secretaries find,
Whatever in the world
Would folks do, for goodness sake,
If they didn't have the clippings
For the scrapbooks that they make.

High-Living Red Captain In Trouble at Home, Too

By PETER EDSON
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — As interest in former British War Minister John Profumo's relations with 21-year-old party girl Christine Keeler now focuses on the third leg of the triangle — Soviet Naval Captain Yevgeniy Mikhailovich Ivanov — the wonder grows in Washington diplomatic circles that the Russian was allowed to continue his scandalous conduct openly for nearly three years.

When Ivanov was assigned to the Russian embassy in London in 1960 as a military attache, he was already a known intelligence agent with a long record of espionage and playboy scandals at his previous post in Oslo, Norway, from 1953 to 1958.

This is what now appears to be the major breach in British security. It is recognized he should have been kicked out as persona non grata long before.

What finally forced Capt. Third Class Yevgeniy M. Ivanoff's recall to Moscow last January was not his notoriety as a drunk and a woman chaser. It was his association with Col. Oleg Penkovskiy, recently executed in Russia after a trial in which he was accused of having given Soviet secrets to western intelligence agents.

Ivanov and Penkovskiy knew each other intimately. They had been classmates for four years at the Military Diplomatic Academy, Russia's top intelligence training school. When Colonel Penkovskiy came to London several times during Captain Ivanov's tour of duty there, 1960-62, they spent much time together.

Ivanov was merely one of a number of Soviet intelligence officers who were yanked back to Moscow from all over the world to give an accounting of their relations with Penkovskiy.

It was apparently Russian fear that Ivanov might be giving Soviet secrets to the British and was himself a security risk that caused his recall to Moscow—not the other way around, that he was exposed as spy and playboy.

There is much speculation that Ivanov may now be in serious difficulty at home, though there has been no news filtering through the Iron Curtain on such a development.

Ivanov's record shows that he claims to have attended the Russian Naval Academy in Vladivostok and to have been graduated from the Caspian Higher Naval Academy. He was commissioned in 1947 and served at sea for three years. In 1950 he was selected for Soviet Military Intelligence Service, GRU, and completed its four - year training courses in 1953.

His first assignment was to Oslo as assistant naval attache. He soon disclosed that he was a very active intelligence officer, making no efforts to cover his trail.

He openly took photos of North Atlantic Treaty naval vessels in port. He was an uninvited observer of NATO naval maneuvers in northern waters. He openly met with Norwegian Communists. And he immediately established a reputation as a drunk and a woman chaser.

In 1954 he was picked up by Norwegian police for disorderly conduct, but was released because of his diplomatic status. The next year he was in trouble after an all-night brawl with a naval officer from another foreign country and a buxom hotel maid at a northern ski resort. The maid was fired. The other officer was transferred. Ivanov went scot-free and remained in Oslo until 1958, when he was reassigned for two years' service at home.

Ivanov's wife is the daughter of A. F. Gorkin, chairman of the Supreme Soviet Court. She is described as a chubby, plain type, in marked contrast to the glamorous model Christine Keeler, with whom her husband and the disgraced John Profumo were involved.

Chief Justice Gorkin has another daughter who is also married to a Soviet military intelligence officer, Col. A. M. Konstantinov. He was Russian air attache in London before Ivanov was assigned there in 1960.

These marriages are cited to show the heights into which the executed spy Col. Penkovskiy's contacts reached. Marriages with the daughters of influential Soviet officials enable young Russian officers to obtain not only plush apartments at home, but the best assignments overseas.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

JFK Takes Gen. Lucius Clay to Germany

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Most interesting passenger in President Kennedy's entourage as he takes off for Germany is Gen. Lucius Clay, the Georgia Democrat turned Republican, who once commanded U.S. troops in Germany.

Those who have closely studied Gen. Clay's operations frankly were mystified. Gen. Clay is the man who admitted in his memoirs that he had made the initial mistake of not negotiating an agreement with Russia giving the United States access rights into Berlin. This is the reason why the Russians and East Germans have controlled the highway into West Berlin and the root cause of all the maneuvering and near war over Berlin.

Furthermore, Gen. Clay, with all his charm and personal magnetism, has the reputation of being more on-again-off-again than any other so-called "friend of the White House."

Here is the record which caused eyebrow-lifting in diplomatic circles when it was learned that Gen. Clay would accompany the President to Germany and Berlin:

1. As postwar commander in Germany, Clay stopped the dismantling of the Nazi war factories, then handed the plants back to the old Nazi cartels. This was in direct contradiction to then American policy, and a surprise to Gen. George Marshall, then chief of staff. Later it contributed to the reason why Truman abruptly accepted Clay's resignation.

2. Though two Democratic presidents, Roosevelt and Truman, had elevated Clay to among the highest commands in the U.S. Army and the Defense Mobilization Board, he turned round to become a brain-truster and booster of Dwight D. Eisenhower, helped raise money for him, later served as "king-maker" for the selection of Ike's cabinet.

Clay was credited with picking George Humphrey to be secretary of the Treasury and Charles E. Wilson of General Motors to be secretary of defense.

By this time Clay had become head of Continental Can, thanks to his friendship with Sidney Weinberg, a director of Continental Can and head of the Goldman-Sachs investment firm. In Ike's day, he had more frequent entree to the White House than anyone, with the possible exception of Tom Dewey.

He dipped his hand into all sorts of policies, from advising that the Voice of America be divorced from the State Department to urging that foreign policy in the cold war be transferred from the State Department to the National Security Council.

3. Vice President Johnson, not aware of Clay's past fumbles, picked him for a joint trip to Berlin during the Berlin wall crisis in 1961. Kennedy later sent him back as U.S. representative, where he made more fumbles.

First he held an off-the-record press conference at which he dropped word that the USA was ready to recognize East Berlin. Next day, following the furor from the West German press, he issued a flat denial. The Kennedy administration then became frozen with that denial.

Next Gen. Clay reinstated military patrols on the Berlin highway as a show of strength. This caused the Russians to bring out a superior show of strength and shoo our patrols off the highways. We bowed. It was a humiliating retreat which no smart commander should have got us into.

Then, when U.S. diplomats refused to show their passports to East German police—though John Foster Dulles previously had OK'd this—Gen. Clay ordered up U.S. tanks.

The Russians retaliated by matching our tanks. It created one of the most dangerous situations of the cold war. The headlines were glorious, but the retreat inglorious. The East Germans are now doing what Clay brought the tanks up to protest against. They are scrutinizing U.S. diplomatic credentials.

This is the retired general whom President Kennedy is taking with him as an adviser on Germany.

Stonehenge near Salisbury, England, is the subject of many legends attempting to explain its origin. One of the earliest was that Merlin of King Arthur's court magically transported the stones from Ireland. Another, the supposed connection between Stonehenge and the Druids, is also without foundation. One fact which has been established by dating through measurements of radioactive carbon is that Stonehenge goes back to about 2000 B.C.

Man Sleeping In Tall Weeds Killed by Mower

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Cecil Bond, 40, was run over by a tractor and mowing machine while he was sleeping in a weed patch Tnursday. He died in a hospital a short time later.

M. L. Dressler, operator of the tractor, said he didn't see the man in the tall weeds.

Predicts Holiday Inn 'Too Small'

Eighty units will not be enough for this town, predicts Vincent Igo, public relations director of Copper Kettle Corp., in conjunction with Holiday Inn. He explained that an area on the north side, which at present will be sodded and landscaped, will, in the not too distant future, be the place where 40 more units will be built. The men here, he said, are too conservative and since he goes all over the entire system, looks the towns and cities over wherever he is for the opening of Holiday Inns, he feels confident his prediction will hold up. Of course they have their fingers crossed because one never knows about the weather, but Walter Nabors, Memphis, Tenn., in charge of construction, believes that it will all be completed by June 28.

Built of glass and aluminum in an architectural design that will not be obsolete in a few years, it has a modernistic style of canopy in front that curls upward and is distinctive of Holiday Inn structure.

Facing the east, the enitre front is of glass with the spacious lobby on the south side of the desk, and the wall in the back and sides built of exposed repossessed brick and mahogany paneling. It is here that patrons will check in.

There is a communications system between the desk and the rooms where they may dial for food and beverage service. There will be lounges, tables, lamps and chairs.

The large banquet room will accommodate 200 people for a dinner or 250 persons for a dance. It has mahogany paneling, and folding doors that will make it into three rooms, each with a private entrance. One of these rooms will seat 110 persons, another 40 and the in-between room for small private meetings of 15 to 18. There are acoustical ceilings, public address systems, beaded screens for movies, blackboards and podium where the speaker may regulate his voice.

A door opens on the south into the dining room which has Haitian mahogany wall paneling that will be rubbed to a luster. The all over carpet of red and black with small floral design, is fire resistant and black and red is carried out in the entire room, with black tufted leather upholstered seats in the two booths, each for four persons, on the east side of the room and a long seat, curved at the ends on both the north and south sides of the room. This will accommodate parties of up to 16 with chairs of mahogany finish on the other side of the tables that may be made into one long table. This room will seat approximately 80 and the table cloths will be red with white overlay. The round lights of lace-like design are of cast aluminum in white and gold and cast a soft light in the dining room which does not leave the room too dark but prevents the glare on the silver and dishes. The dining room will be open 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 5 to 9 p.m. week days, 11:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sundays.

The manager for the restaurant will be Lee Perry. He and his wife expect to move to Sedalia and buy a home.

The banquet room, dining room and the cocktail lounge all look out over the court where there is a swimming pool and landscaping. The cocktail lounge also has the red and black fire resistant carpeting, and the counter has black tufted leather beneath and a rounded black leather rest around the top edge. There will be tables and chairs by the glassed area for seating four at each table and closer to the counter tables for two.

The waitresses will wear black and white pinafore uniforms and little headpieces. They will be trained by Mrs. Edna Bathe of Kansas City. They must have their hairnets on before they go into the dining room, cannot wear too much makeup or exceptional hairdos, and are told the length skirts to wear. There are waitress stations at each side of the dining room. When the dishes are removed from the tables they are put bottom up in the carts so no garbage will show, the silverware stood up in back and the napkins put underneath.

The coffee shop looks out on the highway. The counter is at the north end with upholstery of persimmon color leather on the stools, chairs and two booths on the west side, for four persons each. The south side of the coffee shop is of ornamental glass block made by Pittsburgh-Corning.

The entire building, except in the rooms that are carpeted, has terrazo floors, which is Italian for ground marble.

Throughout the building will be soft recorded music. The draperies in all of the rooms are white and light repellent so movies may be shown.

Between the dining room and the coffee shop is a waitress station where they may quickly get coffee, water, iced tea and hot rolls for customers. The latter will be kept hot in large electric bun warmer. The station is all of stainless steel.

The kitchen is completely of stainless steel with white walls. At the front are the eight gallon automatic coffee urns, a huge refrigerator for salads, salad dressings and cream. At the side is the table with built in containers for salad dressings. The Coke and Seven-Up syrup is kept near the doorway so that they will always be fresh.

At the front, also, is the salad department, with a woman in charge of making all the salads. The waitresses put their orders in a special machine and they are taken out and filled by the chef.

Steaks and things to be broiled are broiled by infrared, not charcoal, for sometimes with charcoal the grease falls causing ashes on the steaks.

There are three big 36 inch grills, double electric French fryers, a walk-in deep freeze and walk-in refrigerator, and four very large Victory refrigerators and deep freeze boxes.

On a table is a General Electric microwave oven used in cooking by penetrating electric waves. Eggs may be cooked and served in three seconds, an eight ounce potato can be cooked through in four minutes; and it takes four minutes and 15 seconds to cook trout and have it ready to serve even though the trout is frozen hard in ice water when put in.

There is a deep freeze box that has nothing but frozen fish and there are complete menus of all seafood every day.

They bake their own pies and rolls seven days a week and have montague forced air ovens which cuts the baking time in half.

Sanitation is a must in everything and the most important thing in the kitchen is the dish washing, which is all automatic, with human hands never touching the dishes or silver. There is a container into which the paper is put when the dishes are brought in, the silver is put into a chemical for soaking and the dishes in another place. The silverware is rinsed, then put into 200 degree rinsing machine and dried by air. The same precaution is taken with other dishes.

There is a garbage room, completely white, although there is never any garbage except paper. The entire kitchen is steamed each night throughout by portable steam system.

The parking area serves 230 cars and this does not interfere with the parking of the Holiday Inn guests.

The 80 sleeping units are built in an L shape with two stories and are colorful in the daytime but even more so at night for there are four different color schemes and the lights show through the draperies of therma glass which make up the outside walls, so that each unit is a different color.

There are single units with a double bed, a completely tiled bathroom, both the floor and the lower part of the walls, with tub, shower and stool, and a separate division for the lavatory, with a mirror above and a boudoir chair. In the bedroom, in addition to the bed, is a dresser with mirror, two chairs with a combination table and lamp between them and a bench. The four colors used are avocado, turquoise, gold and biscuit. The upholstery, draperies, wall to wall carpet, bed-spread, and bathroom tile carry out the color scheme in each room.

In each room, too, is an electric coffee host on the bathroom wall where anyone may make his own coffee if he chooses to do so. There are also clothes racks.

The next room to the single unit is a double unit, and there is a door between to give families or groups who want them the two rooms together, or the smaller may be used as a meeting room. The double unit has two double beds and other furniture accordingly. These bathrooms are larger with the lavatory having a wide dressing table space and a big mirror above.

There is one room in blue, with everything carried out in that color. The walls are white and across one is a mural of boughs in blue with bluebirds flying around. The furniture is white French provincial with gold and there is a kingsize bed. This, of course, is a very special room, it is the bridal suite. The draperies in this room are white.

Mrs. Irene Wallington is the housekeeper in charge of the units and will train the women. Each will be expected to clean a unit entirely in 40 minutes.

No member of any family seems to have been forgotten. They even have a kennel for the dogs, and very nice big dog houses, too. Dogs are not allowed in the units.

The pool on the court is large and scalloped at the ends, and on both sides are the areas which are all ready to be sodded and lanscaped. There are gas lamps, and lights along both stories of the building.

Across the road is the Holiday Inn service station which has been leased to Skelly Oil Co., and is in the process of being built.

Reservations may be made in one Holday Inn for one in another city by communication between them.

Drives and walks are not all complete because of the rain that has prevented the laying of concrete and black topping.

Fire Department Rescues Boy Stuck In Pipe

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Here's what happened after the left leg of Bobby Dessent, 2, got stuck Wednesday in an uncapped pipe housing a water valve in a neighbor's yard:

A playmate summoned Bobby's mother, Mrs. Robert K. Dessent. She failed to free the leg by tugging it and oiling it.

A big red fire engine drove up and four big firemen with red fire hats took charge. A pan of soapy water was poured into the pipe without result.

A hole was dug around the 3-foot-long pipe while the firemen consoled Bobby. Then, while two firemen turned Bobby, another turned the pipe. After about four turns the pipe was freed from the valve—with Bobby's leg still inside.

Finally, a fireman reached into the pipe, about 5 inches in diameter, and pushed. Bobby's leg came free.

Breitweiser To Top Post In Oil Firm

S. D. Breitweiser

The election of Stanley D. Breitweiser of Tulsa, Okla., a former Sedalian, as a director and vice-president of Cities Service Oil Company has been announced by Robert L. Kidd, chairman of the board.

Breitweiser and his wife Sarah lived in Sedalia at 711 West Broadway and at 1012 West Fourth Street when he was with the Conoco company as district superintendent during the period 1941 to 1946.

The Cities Service Gas Co. magazine "Dispatcher" gives the following account of Breitweiser's management background:

"The new executive joined Cities Service Oil Company on May 1 as general manager of all Cities Service domestic marketing operations. He brings to the management team of the company more than 30 years of experience in marketing.

"Mr. Breitweiser entered the marketing field when he was 19 years old and worked up through the ranks of Continental Oil Company to the general sales managership in 22 years.

"He joined Vickers Petroleum Company at Wichita, Kans., in 1954 as a vice president and director. Three years later, he moved to Tulsa as vice president and marketing director of a Sunray DX Oil Company subsidiary. He was advanced to the top spot in the subsidiary and in 1962, was named senior vice president of Sunray DX parent company.

"As Vice President in charge of Marketing, Mr. Breitweiser succeeds F. M. Simpson, who will assume new duties as assistant to the president."

Van Dyke Other Things Can Do

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Jerry Van Dyke, at 31 on the threshold of an exciting television career, is a comedian who is something of an expert on brotherly relationships.

His expertise has really been forced upon him. He is the look-alike younger brother of Dick Van Dyke and chose to follow his brother into show business-comedy department. But there, Jerry insists, the similarity ends.

"I've done a little checking," Jerry admitted, "and I can't find a single instance where a younger brother was as successful as an older brother in the comedy field. Fortunately, I don't go in for the same type of comedy as Dick."

During recent years when Dick, almost six years older, was becoming a skillful actor specializing in comedy, Jerry had been developing his night-club routines—telling unsophisticated jokes, strumming on his old banjo and creating a lovable low-key, dopey character which, he hopes, is identifiable to his audiences.

He walked into the national spotlight last season, appearing in two episodes of "The Dick Van Dyke Show," playing hero Rob's younger brother. CBS promptly put him under contract.

Next Tuesday night he will start his summer chores as host on CBS' "Picture This," a game show replacing Jack Benny for the season. And, in the fall, he will appear as a comedy regular on "The Judy Garland Show," one of the new season's really big new programs.

The combination has turned Jerry into one of the transcontinental airline's best customers. He'll split each week evenly between California, where the Garland show soon goes into production, and New York, where "Picture This" will be made. It works out so that his day off, if any, will be in California where he lives in Sherman Oaks with his wife and two young daughters.

Unlike some other theatrical families where sibling rivalry has known to be pretty fierce, even unfriendly, the Van Dyke boys are close. Jerry has nothing but awe and admiration for his brother.

"Right now I'm Dick Van Dyke's kid brother," he said. "And I don't mind that a bit and it's sure helped. But I hope that pretty soon when somebody mentions Van Dyke, people are going to ask, 'Which one?' "

Miss Somebody from West Virginia Is Twins!

The latest "unknown" beauties to be discovered by Family Weekly are sisters who look so much alike that even their father has trouble telling them apart

Photos and Text by OZZIE SWEET

DARK-EYED, delicately featured Janet Kesler struck me immediately as the kind of girl I was searching for to be FAMILY WEEKLY's 12th Miss Somebody.

But a difficulty arose: folks in Beckley, W. Va., told me, "There's another one just like her." And how right they were—for I found that Janet has an equally lovely identical twin sister, Judith. (Even their father, Clarence E. Kesler, sometimes has trouble telling them apart.)

So, to stay out of double trouble, I recommended that FAMILY WEEKLY present twins as its Miss Somebody cover girls for the first time since the series began in 1960.

Despite the inevitable problems that result from looking alike, the 17-year-old beauties enjoy being twins. In fact, they share a companionship and mutual regard that is rare among sisters and even unusual among twins. Their consideration for each other was particularly apparent in their decision not to apply to attend the International Girl Scout Roundup in Vermont last summer. They felt both would not be accepted, and each preferred to forgo the pleasure if the other couldn't enjoy it, too.

That was a lot to give up, for Janet and Judy have been active in Scouting ever since they became Brownies at seven. Both girls have earned the Curved Bar, highest award in Intermediate Scouting, and they have participated in a wide variety of Girl Scout activities—including a rifle-marksmanship course that earned them sharpshooter badges.

But the twins don't always do everything together. Each is very definitely a different personality, and they pursue individual interests. For instance, in the last few months, Janet has been in the senior play and the all-state chorus, while Judy has been prom queen and attendant to the high school's Centennial Queen (West Virginia is currently celebrating its 100th year of statehood). Only on rare occasions do the girls double date.

The Kesler twins' happy facility for keeping their individuality while remaining the closest of pals is evident in their plans for going away to school this autumn. Judy, who wants to be a schoolteacher, will enroll at Marshall University. Janet will become a student nurse at St. Mary's Hospital. Both institutions, however, are in the same city, Huntington, W. Va.

And so, although Janet and Judy will be going their separate ways—they'll still be together.

In the Kesler kitchen, the twins help their mother make a pie. That's Judy on the left.

The twins, their parents, and brother Larry. Another brother, Clark, lives in New Mexico.

Nowadays General de Gaulle rides in armored sedan with police escort.

In today's France, where murderous conspiracy has become an accepted part of politics, the question is not whether Le Grand Charles can stay in power but whether he can stay alive

THE PLOT TO KILL DE GAULLE

By GEOFFREY BOCCA

WHEN GENERAL Charles de Gaulle lunched with Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, he was protected by a security cordon such as Western Europe had never seen in peacetime, not even for Khrushchev.

Thousands of French and Dutch police guarded him. His time and place of arrival were changed at the very last moment and so was the luncheon rendezvous.

So anxious were the Dutch to keep de Gaulle from being murdered on Dutch soil that they even cheated on their royal obligations and flew the royal standard from a palace other than the one where the Queen was in residence.

Why, among Western leaders, should only de Gaulle live in such constant fear of his life? Why, with the conspiratorial O.A.S. all but broken, should he consider himself closer to assassination than ever before?

The answer lies in the character of the country: France, so urbane, civilized, and prosperous, has become more than ever a land of murderous conspiracies.

If the O.A.S. (Organisation de l'Armée Secrète) is indeed broken, there are plenty of other conspirators ready to take over its apparatus for murder, even as the O.A.S. itself took over from an organization called the Red Hand.

The Red Hand was a group of Algerian Frenchmen dedicated to killing agents who supplied arms to the Algerian rebels. Their most extraordinary murder was that of a Swiss arms dealer, Marcel Léopold, in 1959.

Léopold's wife answered the doorbell of their apartment in an elegant quarter of Geneva—and looked into the contorted face of her husband. He had time only to say to her: "I have been poisoned," before he dropped dead at her feet.

But he died under an illusion; he had, in fact, been killed by a tiny arrow that penetrated his heart. The arrow was propelled from the tube of a bicycle pump concealed inside the assassin's sleeve between elbow and wrist. Triggered by an explosive, it made no more noise than a sigh. "It was the invention of a ballistics genius," said the Geneva police. The murderer was never caught.

The apparatus of the Red Hand was taken over by the O.A.S. when the French generals in Algeria rebelled against de Gaulle in 1960. To counter the O.A.S., de Gaulle surrounded himself with a secret corps of killers who have become famous as the barbouzes (which means "the bearded ones"). Most of these men are ex-officers and former intelligence men from de Gaulle's wartime Free French forces. They work alone; other French security organizations know almost nothing about them.

Terror in Algeria

After de Gaulle decided to grant Algerian independence, he sent the barbouzes into Algeria to smash the O.A.S. Mercilessly, the two groups set about killing each other. The O.A.S. blew up four barbouze headquarters in succession. In three months, 70 barbouzes were killed by bazookas, plastic bombs, and machine guns. Once a gang of O.A.S. men opened fire on a car carrying four bandaged barbouzes to an Algiers hospital. Then without waiting to see whether they were dead or alive, they threw gasoline over the car and set it on fire.

Sometimes the fight between a barbouze and an O.A.S. man took the form of a personal duel, since the two may well have been old comrades-in-arms in Indochina or during the early fighting in Algeria. They had a word for it: ponctualité. They would set out to keep a "punctuality" secretly; and at the end of it, one of them would be lying dead in an Algiers gutter.

In old days before assassination attempts, de Gaulle pushed into mobs, supremely confident that no Frenchman wished him harm.

With Algerian independence, the O.A.S. faded away into Spain and Germany—and the barbouzes followed them. By now, many of France's finest soldiers were desperate outlaws with only one aim: to kill de Gaulle.

Two events point up the viciousness of the continuing struggle between the O.A.S. and the barbouzes. The first was a near triumph for the O.A.S., and the second was a brilliant victory for the barbouzes.

De Gaulle Outwits an Ambush

On Aug. 22 of last year, de Gaulle was being driven from Paris to Villacoubly Airport. Behind his automobile was a single security car and two motorcycle policemen. As the little convoy slowed down in the village of Petit Clamart, a man jumped from the back of a van and opened fire with a machine gun.

But the would-be assassins forgot that de Gaulle was one of the best soldiers France has produced in this century. The President instantly recognized the classic military concept of the ambush and ordered his chauffeur to continue straight ahead at full speed. The car roared into another blast of machine-gun fire which riddled the windows and blew out two tires. But the car's speed took the second echelon of gunmen by surprise, and de Gaulle was saved.

Ten bullets had hit the car, one missing de Gaulle's head by inches. He remained calm and even jocular, but the incident persuaded him that a helicopter is the best way to travel relatively short distances. Because of the incident, de Gaulle also has given up his old habit of plunging into crowds to shake people's hands.

Within a month, the gunmen were caught. The ringleader, Jean-Marie Bastien-Thiry, was a young man of 35 and as handsome as a movie star. A former test pilot, he was a graduate of the Polytechnic, France's finest school, which traditionally produces the nation's top leaders.

At his trial, Bastien-Thiry created a sensation. He said he had planned the ambush only after receiving the blessing of the Church, which sanctions killing tyrants under certain conditions—conditions which, Bastien-Thiry believed, were amply fulfilled in France. The Army, the Polytechnic, the Church—de Gaulle's list of enemies seemed to be endlessly multiplying.

The second incident, the arrest last February of another Polytechnic graduate, Colonel Argoud, was a great coup for the barbouzes. Three Frenchmen called on Argoud at his hideout in Germany and showed him police cards. Argoud believed that they were detectives and decided the game was up. He got into a van with them. All at once, he realized they were barbouzes and, certain that they were about to kill him, began to resist. He was given a brutal beating.

Somehow they smuggled Argoud out of Germany and into the heart of Paris. Here they acted in a manner that defies explanation, except to show that barbouzes are not required to behave like other people. Leaving Argoud gagged and trussed in the van in a busy street, they went into a café to telephone the police. Without making any attempt at secrecy, they informed the police that Argoud was waiting for them in the van. Several people at the bar heard them. The barbouzes hung around until they saw the police cars approaching; then they vanished.

How has such a situation come to pass in France? The unhappy answer is that France has never recovered psychologically from its defeat in 1940.

Let us examine briefly the career of a French military man in his middle 30s. When he was 15, France was overrun by the Nazis. The boy went underground and joined the Résistance. Along with unforgettable experiences of heroism and bravery, he also witnessed assassination, arson, sabotage, and torture.

After the war, he fought for nine years in Indochina and saw his comrades die while political bickering in Paris allowed the Communists to become strong. After Indochina, he went to Algeria. Here the French decisively defeated the rebels and drove them into hiding. But de Gaulle granted independence to Algeria, and the young Frenchman watched in impotent rage while hundreds of thousands of Algerians who had eagerly supported France were delivered to the mercy of the rebels.

The Gunslinger Generation

All his life he has known nothing but fighting and frustration. He does not have to be a member of the O.A.S., but he cannot turn to parliament. Under the Third Republic, he despised it; under de Gaulle's Fourth, it scarcely exists. But he is an expert with a machine gun and plastic bombs. He can booby-trap a car and plot a clever ambush. Above all, he has access to innumerable groups whose politics is plotting.

Conspiracy in France has a long tradition. The fight between the O.A.S. and the barbouzes is really a continuation of the fight between Frenchmen who supported Marshal Henri Pétain during World War II and those who supported de Gaulle's Free French. The bitterness has grown stronger with the passing years.

De Gaulle has the majority of Frenchmen on his side. His real strength is that there is no alternative to him. But his enemies argue that the best way to create an alternative is to kill de Gaulle. The crisis may well last his lifetime, however long or short that may be.

The Suspense Is Terrible

Our new car has no squeaks or rattles,
And also, new to parking battles,
It has no dents, no scars, no scratches,
No fixed-up places, painted patches.

Of bumps and thumps that lie ahead,
That till they come, I cry: "Alack!"
And wish I had my old car back.

The sweater retrieved from where it was tossed,
Along with a missing book of French,
Dad's voice now cries for his monkey wrench.
So the one-girl searching party goes
To point it out to him under his nose.

For they're all good losers who couldn't be blinder.
And Mom's the official family finder.
And hunting for things, she's willing to bet
The finder will need a keeper yet!

—Georgie Starbuck Galbraith

The test pilot was strapped inside the Air Force's newest rocket plane. From the radio tower came the check of all the intricate controls that would hurl the experimental aircraft through the edge of space.

Finally the check was completed and the control tower asked: "That's it. Anything bothering you?"

"Yes," the test pilot replied softly. "I just wish all this wasn't put together by the lowest bidder."

—John Shotwell

The second-grade teacher was amazed one morning when a small boy who was not among her better students raised his hand when she asked this question: "Can anybody tell me where Houston is?"

Nodding to the youngster, she said, "All right, you may answer the question."

"Houston," replied the boy proudly, "is playing in Los Angeles tonight, but tomorrow I don't know where they'll be."

My baby looks like the Gerber baby—

Bringing Up Baby®
Hints Collected
by Mrs. Dan Gerber,
Mother of 5

Of all the warm and wonderful words, written by warm and wonderful mothers, none please me more than these: "My baby looks like the Gerber Baby." Because I like to think the Gerber Baby has a special something that belongs to all babies who are loved. It lights up their eyes. It sings out in their shining faces. It speaks softly of inner security . . . proof positive of a happy heart.

Yes, love is the strong song, managing miracles nothing else can. When you love a baby you wrap him in a smile that will warm him a whole life through.

Mothers often write to ask if the Gerber Baby is a boy baby or a girl baby. Well, our little charmer was conceived not as a he or she, but a representative baby . . . the beautiful kind all mothers have.

When the Gerber Baby first appeared in Gerber advertisements over 30 years ago, mothers by the score began writing for reprints of the little sketch. (Matter of fact, the very popularity of the picture prompted the decision to use the baby as the Gerber trademark.) If you would like a print suitable for framing, just send 10¢, to cover costs, to: Gerber Baby Foods, Dept. 806-3, Fremont, Michigan.

Today, the Gerber Baby is more than just a famous trademark. It has become the symbol of the specialists who devote all their energies to the most important people . . . your baby and all babies. Their efforts are never-ending in behalf of better infant nutrition. From research, all through processing and final packing, the people who prepare your baby's food look upon the Gerber Baby as their special representative for Gerber quality.

Important: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—cereals, strained and junior—to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say: "BABIES ARE OUR BUSINESS . . . OUR ONLY BUSINESS!"®

A list of State Agents will be sent upon request

HAVE THIS HOSPITAL/SURGICAL/MEDICAL INSURANCE

Your doctor, your own insurance agent, your lawyer will tell you what fine protection this is. Talk it over with them, but do it soon. This enrollment period must end midnight, June 27th.

65 PLUS offers basic protection

If you do not have any health insurance at all, the 65 PLUS (OA series) plan offers you excellent basic hospital-surgical protection. If you now have basic Blue Cross, or any similar basic hospital coverage, by all means keep it. You are still eligible to join 10,000 RESERVE or 5,000 MEDICAL—or both—and add these wonderful major-expense benefits to your total protection.

10,000 RESERVE is for the big bills

10,000 RESERVE (OD series) is designed for really big expenses and to start paying benefits when bills get "too big" for you to handle, or most of the benefits of your basic plan have "run out." To do this, 10,000 RESERVE has a "deductible" feature that works very much the same as the "deductible" feature used in auto collision insurance. Each calendar year after you, or 65 PLUS, or any other basic plan you may have, has paid the first $500 of eligible expenses, the 10,000 RESERVE plan goes into effect and pays 75% of all further eligible expenses during that calendar year up to a lifetime maximum of $10,000. Then, after a proven continuous 6-month period without treatment, the full $10,000 program can be restored. (Special provisions for California residents). As you can see, the 10,000 RESERVE plan in no way conflicts with any basic plan you may now have. It is the perfect "companion" policy to add to any basic plan.

5,000 MEDICAL plan is for out-of-hospital expenses

The 5,000 MEDICAL (OE series) plan offers protection against out-of-hospital expenses and also features a deductible. Each calendar year after your eligible out-of-hospital expenses have reached $100, the 5,000 MEDICAL plan takes over and pays 75% of all further eligible expenses during that calendar year up to a lifetime maximum of $5,000. Then, after a proven continuous 6-month period without treatment, the full $5,000 program can be restored. This is the first plan of its kind ever offered to anyone and everyone 65 or over!

Under 65?

If you are 64 now, plan to join one or more of these plans when you reach 65. Clip the coupon now and save it. Mail it to us within 30 days before or after your 65th birthday and you will be enrolled.

Sons and daughters enroll your parents

Signature of the insured is not required

If you have an older relative in your family, many of you will want to give him or her one or more of these policies and make the premium payments yourself. It's a wise and wonderful idea. Just fill out the enrollment blank and indicate where the premium notices are to be sent.

Income Tax Note: If you declare a parent or relative as a dependent on your Federal Income Tax, your payments of premiums for this health insurance are 100% tax deductible.

Regardless of your past or present health—

- Everybody accepted
- No health questions
- No physical exam to qualify

This is your Guarantee...

As long as you pay your premium, your policy will never be cancelled, no changes will ever be made, unless done so to all policyholders in your state. Of course, you have the right to cancel your policy at any time. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE: After you have received your policy, or policies, and examine it, if you are not 100% satisfied, return it within ten days and your first month's premium will be refunded.

* * *

For the purpose of satisfying your deductible and calculating benefits payable for 10,000 RESERVE and 5,000 MEDICAL, the first calendar year is that period commencing on the effective date of your policy and ending December 31 of the same year in which your coverage becomes effective; after the first year, each calendar year is from January 1st through December 31st. Eligible expenses incurred toward the deductible during the last 90 days of the first policy year will be counted towards the deductible of the next calendar year.

HIGHLIGHTING LEMON AND LIME IN

Layered Gelatin Molds

Family Weekly Cookbook • MELANIE DE PROFT, Food Editor

NOTES ON GELATIN MOLDS

1. Lightly oil mold with salad or cooking oil (not olive oil); invert to drain. Or, if desired, rinse mold with cold water.
2. Dissolve flavored gelatin by pouring the boiling water over gelatin in a bowl and stirring until completely dissolved.
3. Chill a clear gelatin mixture until slightly thicker than consistency of thick, unbeaten egg white. Chill an opaque gelatin mixture until it begins to gel (becomes slightly thicker). If chilled over ice and water, stir frequently; if chilled in refrigerator, stir occasionally.
4. Chill gelatin layer in mold until just set, but not firm, before adding another layer.
5. Unmold gelatin by first running the tip of a knife around the edge to loosen it and admit air, then inverting the mold on a chilled serving plate. Garnish with lettuce, curly endive, crinkly leaf spinach, water cress, or mint leaves sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. Center of ring mold may be filled with pimiento-stuffed or ripe olives, water cress, or a bowl of commercial or homemade salad dressing.

Molded Turkey-Tomato Aspic Salad

- ⅔ cup cold water
- 2 tablespoons (2 env.) unflavored gelatin
- 1⅓ cups turkey broth or quick chicken broth
- 1⅓ cups mayonnaise
- 1 6-oz. can (⅔ cup) evaporated milk
- 1½ teaspoons Accent
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 2⅔ cups cubed cooked turkey
- 1 cup finely chopped celery
- ⅓ cup chopped parsley
- ⅓ cup chopped salted almonds
- ¼ cup capers
- 1 3-oz. pkg. lemon-flavored gelatin
- ¾ cup boiling water
- 1 8-oz. can tomato sauce
- ¼ teaspoon garlic salt
- 12 slices pimiento-stuffed olives

1. Soften unflavored gelatin in cold water; set over low heat and stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Stir in turkey broth. Chill (see note 3).
2. Blend the mayonnaise, evaporated milk, Accent, and salt together in a large bowl.
3. Add thickened gelatin in small amounts, blending well after each addition. Stir in the next five ingredients. Set in refrigerator.
4. Dissolve lemon-flavored gelatin in boiling water. Stir in the tomato sauce and garlic salt.
5. Pour a small amount of tomato gelatin into an oiled 2-qt. fancy mold. Chill until slightly thickened; chill remainder (see note 3).
6. Press olive slices into gelatin in bottom of mold. Spoon remaining tomato gelatin into mold over olive layer. Chill (see note 4).
7. Spoon turkey mixture into mold over first layer. Chill until firm, about 4 hrs.
8. Unmold and garnish. About 10 servings

First he was acclaimed for his bravery at a disastrous fire, then some said he was a bold liar! Here is the story of a "little guy's" search for justice

They Called Me a

LOTS OF PEOPLE dream of becoming a hero. I had the dream come true, and it turned out to be a nightmare.

I went from being a hero to heel and back to hero again. This is how it happened.

My uncle and I spent the evening of Dec. 15, 1962, with friends. It was past midnight when we started home in my ancient car. As we approached an intersection near the California state capitol in Sacramento, a woman driver passed us in a burst of speed.

I could see she wasn't going to stop at the intersection ahead, where the light was blinking red. Approaching on the cross street was a huge oil tanker.

The two vehicles collided in the center of the street in a crash of grinding steel and splintered glass. By reflex I slammed on my brakes. My uncle and I jumped out.

Seconds later we heard an explosion. I saw the truck driver frantically struggling to get out of the crumpled cab. From the car came the scream of a woman. Then silence. It was the last sound she ever made.

The truck driver jumped to the street and started running. Flames leaped from his clothes. The more he ran, the more the flames spread. He pawed at them with his hands without doing much good. I ran after him.

I overtook the driver and wrestled him to the street. Without thinking, I began beating out the fire on his shirt with my bare hands. It didn't hurt at the time. He kept yelling, "Help me, help me!"

Meanwhile, the explosion had sent showers of burning gasoline down on two nearby apartments. Later I learned that 8,750 gallons had erupted like a flame thrower.

I slapped again at the flames on the driver's clothing as he twisted in agony, but I was afraid to slap too hard. Burned flesh hung from his hands.

I got him to roll in the street. I had to roll him away from the truck because the fire kept moving toward us. Somehow I got him across the street, and he lay down in a puddle of water. That put out the rest of the fire.

His name is James R. Moore. He lay near death for months in a hospital, but recovered.

Next I looked up and saw the burning apartments. There are people sleeping in there! I thought.

Frankly, I was a little panicky by then, but I kicked in the front door of one apartment. There was a Chinese man inside, half asleep. I remember he was wearing funny-looking shorts with polka dots. This was to become an important detail in my story.

"Get out—fast!" I yelled. He hurried out the rear door. I ran back down the front steps and raced around the corner. As I ran, I knocked on doors hoping to alert the tenants. There wasn't time to go inside. Some of the doors were already wrapped in oil-dripping flames.

Then I fell down in the street. I think that was how I got burned, and here is an odd thing: the flames never touched me! The heat alone was intense enough to burn my skin.

I saw Moore still lying in the street. I led him down to some railroad tracks, away from spreading flames. By now fire trucks and ambulances were there. Police loaded Moore into one ambulance and me into another. At County Hospital I was treated for deep burns on my right arm from the wrist nearly to the shoulder. Then I went home.

Next day the newspapers headlined: "Heroism of Passing Driver Cheats Death"; "Jobless Cannery Worker Hero of Fire"; and "Betti Named as Hero at Fiery Collision."

That week the city council voted me $200 and a certificate for bravery. The money sure came in handy because I hadn't worked since the canning season, and I have three kids. Then the Safety Council announced it was considering me for its Valor Award. There was talk of putting me up for the coveted Carnegie Medal. I was feeling pretty good. I felt even better when an official told me the city would give me a job.

But the wheels of good fortune suddenly spun in reverse. I got a telephone call from police headquarters.

"We want to talk to you, Mario," said the officer. "Come on down here." I thought he just wanted a report.

But at headquarters I was taken into a room and questioned for several hours. One of the officers said bluntly:

"I've been checking up on that fire, Mario, and your story sounds fishy. We have witnesses who say that they never saw you near the scene."

"I don't know what you mean," I said. "Of course I was there. Ask the truck driver. Look at my arm, my burns." Suddenly I was scared, even though I was telling the truth.

The officer glanced at my bandaged arm indifferently. "The hospital reports say that burn could have been made by a sun lamp," he said. "Come clean, Mario. Why did you accept that money from the city for being a hero?"

Over and over, I protested that my story was the truth. I felt I was getting the third degree. Finally, they let me go home—"But we'll be seeing you again soon!" one said.

NEXT DAY the newspapers carried headlines of a different type. I was angry and bewildered when I saw: "New Report Casts Doubt on Betti's Role in Crash-Fire" and "Conflicting Reports Reopen Probe of Fatal Crash."

Then one night my wife said: "Mario, the police want to see you again. They came here—to the house!" Then she burst into tears. Watching her, I finally got mad. Why should I get pushed around? Why should my family take this? What had I done wrong?

I had heard of Anthony Scalora, a Sacramento criminal lawyer. I couldn't afford Scalora's fee, but I guessed right when I went to him. He has often helped the underdog, and he listened to my story sympathetically, then issued a statement to the press. "I am serving notice on the police: either charge Betti or leave him alone."

After that, the police questioning stopped. Several weeks passed, but the clouds of distrust still hung over my head.

"Hey, Mario, are you a hero or a bum?" one guy yelled at me on the street. A neighbor asked: "Have they arrested you yet?" Then I went to a city official to ask about the job that I had been promised.

Hero—

Then a Heel

By MARIO BETTI as told to Dick Pollard

"Oh, you're that guy in the fire," he said. "No, I'm afraid we don't have an opening."

I feared I would live out my life under suspicion—of what? But Scalora never let up in his efforts to clear my name. One day he telephoned me:

"I hired a private detective to check your story," he said. "He has found the Chinese man whose door you broke down. And he talked to other witnesses at the scene. Mario, your story checks out in every way!"

But so what? The world still didn't know I was telling the truth. I pleaded with Scalora to arrange a lie-detector test for me. "I want to stand or fall on the results," I said. He agreed.

SCALORA contacted Dick Pollard, my collaborator on this story and a staff writer for The Sacramento Union. Pollard and his editor, William R. Conlin, agreed, in their words, "that Betti should have his day in court."

Pollard arranged for a polygraph examination by the nationally known experts, Reid & Associates (see FAMILY WEEKLY, Dec. 2, 1962). George Harman was to conduct the test in San Francisco.

When the day arrived, I was a case of nerves. Sure, I was innocent of any wrongdoing, but would the test show it? Pollard reassured me as we drove to the city.

"Just relax, Mario, and tell the truth again when they start the test," he said. "Everything will be all right."

Nevertheless, my hands were moist and my mouth dry as Harman connected the wires of the mysterious machine and attached the blood-pressure bands. The questioning began. At first, Harman asked a lot of questions that had nothing to do with the fire. Suddenly he shot at me:

"Did you help the truck driver at the fire?"

"Yes," I said. I tried not to watch the needle which travels smoothly when a person is telling the truth but wavers at a lie. Did it waver? I couldn't be sure.

More questions, about my past life, my family, how long I had lived in Sacramento—and questions about the fire.

At last the ordeal was over. Pollard and Harman consulted in another room, leaving me alone with my fears. I was so confused by events I even had doubts about myself! Finally the two walked out, and Harmon said: "You were telling the truth about the fire in every detail."

All I wanted to do was to get home and tell my family.

The Union carried the results of the lie test on the front page. The district attorney's office and police announced the following day their investigations were "closed." I was given a job by a friendly restaurant manager. Then came the Safety Council's citation:

"Man of Valor Award . . . to Mario Betti," it read. "For outstanding heroism at the scene of a disastrous fire."

Said The Union: "In our land, justice must prevail for the individual . . . he deserves the earnest concern of those who look after the preservation of our liberties."

Not that I want to be known as a hero. I just want to be a man who can hold his head up. Thanks to an attorney and a newspaper, I can.
